总 序

五年前，为配合各高校全面贯彻执行《大学英语教学指南》中提高大学生英语能力、培养国际化人才的要求，我们参照《国家中长期教育改革与发展规划纲要(2010-2020年)》以及《教育部关于全面提高高等教育质量的若干意见》的精神，在上海外语教育出版社的帮助下，组织全国十多所高校设计、编写了这套“新目标大学英语系列教材”。

本系列教材充分反映了当今外语教学理论，并基于对中国大学英语现状与发展趋势的充分调研，受到了广大师生的喜爱。为了更好体现《大学英语教学指南》(2020版)和《中国英语能力等级量表》的要求，我们对教材进行了修订，使其更符合新的大学英语教学需求。

一、教材特色

“新目标大学英语系列教材”之“新目标”包含三层含义：1. 全球化和高等教育国际化发展趋势以及中国新的国家发展战略对中国大学生英语能力提出的新目标和新要求；2.《大学英语教学指南》(2020版)对大学英语提出的新的多元化课程目标；3. 各个大学根据学校办学定位、特色、人才培养规格对学生英语能力设定的新目标和新要求。

教材设计体现以下特色：

1. 以学生为本

各教程注重语言知识的讲解与传授，以及语言技能、学习技能和思维能力的培养，通过任务、活动及练习的设置引导学生在“做”中“学”，在真实的语言交际环境中提高学习技能和语言技能。教材主题的选择对接学生的年龄特点和时代特点，符合学生认知和情感能力发展的需求，可帮助学生拓宽国际视野及提升综合素养。练习类型包括主题拓展、语言知识、思维训练、自主学习能力培养等方面。

2. 多维度多层次的立体体系

教材继承传统的“《综合教程》+其他”教材体系，根据新时期大学英语教学的特点以及英语学习的最佳路径，构建全新的“《综合教程》+《视听说教程》+《阅读教程》+‘主题英语教程’”教材体系，不仅全面培养学生的英语听、说、读、写能力，而且注重提高大学生科学人文素养和跨文化交际能力，并培养他们以英语为媒介从事专业学习和国际学术交流的能力。

二、教材结构

本系列教材的结构体系按照《大学英语教学指南》(2020版)提出的“通用英语”

“专门用途英语”和“跨文化交际”三大板块进行设计、编写。

通用英语

通用英语教材旨在全面提高学生的英语语言技能，为后续课程（特别是专门用途英语课程或全英语专业课程）的学习打下基础。

《综合教程》：1—4册(刘正光主编)

《综合教程》通过帮助学生阅读符合其认知和情感特点的优秀范文，掌握基本阅读技能和语言基础知识，逐步形成系统的组织和表达思想的能力，同时利用阅读材料所提供的英语语言素材和相关主题知识，培养学生综合使用语言的能力。

《视听说教程》：1—4册(徐锦芬主编)

《视听说教程》涵盖丰富的视听练习和口头语言交际活动，话题和难度从通用英语过渡到学术英语，注重让学生通过自主学习、合作学习和项目式学习提高听说能力，培养批判性思维，获得听懂专业课程、参与学术交流的能力。

《阅读教程》：1—4册(束定芳主编)

《阅读教程》的主题完全对应《综合教程》的主题，教材内容不仅增加了相同主题选文的体裁和数量，更重要的是帮助学生进一步巩固和拓展相关主题知识和语言技能，熟练掌握阅读技巧，提升阅读速度。

专门用途英语

《科技英语教程》(王腊宝主编)；《人文社科英语教程》(文旭主编)

这两本教材是专门为理工科和人文社科专业方向学生进入全英语专业课学习或阅读专业文献而编写的过渡性教材，也可作为不同专业学生的拓展阅读教程。

跨文化交际

《中国文化英语教程》(束定芳主编)；《西方文化英语教程》(殷企平主编)

这两本教材的设计充分考虑到中国学生对中国传统文化和西方文化的兴趣，能满足学生深入了解中国传统文化和西方文化的需求。

三、教材修订情况

近五年来，高等教育乃至整个教育领域都发生了较大的变化。

2018年9月，教育部会同国家有关部委集中出台了“六卓越一拔尖”2.0计划。几乎所有的文件都针对“国际交流和国际化人才培养”提出了具体的要求。2020年，《大学英

语教学指南》(2020版)正式颁布并出版。新《指南》在课程思政、教学要求、教学内容、教学方法与手段、教师发展等方面都做了相关的修订和补充。

为了使大学英语教学更好地服务高等学校“双一流”建设和国际化人才培养，我们组织了“新目标大学英语系列教材”的修订工作。

本次修订工作主要集中在《综合教程》和《视听说教程》，其他教程在吸收读者反馈的基础上，也将陆续修订。

本次修订的主要内容和原则如下：第一，替换部分课文，适当增加中国文化内容的比重，补充围绕中国文化主题的练习；第二，增加培养学生逻辑思维、创新思维和批判性思维的练习和活动；第三，对部分练习的内容和形式进行调整，拓展课程思政元素的内涵，帮助学生提高讲好中国故事的能力；第四，根据部分学校师生的建议，降低原先部分语料的难度，增加更符合学生实际水平和专业学习的语言输入。

希望此次修订能更好地帮助学生提升核心素养，培养跨文化意识和跨文化交际能力，在提升英语能力的同时，学习中外文化知识和相关专业知识。

四、教材使用建议

本系列教材可充分满足《大学英语教学指南》(2020版)提出的通用英语课程中基础级和提高级的教学要求，各高校可根据本校学生的实际情况和教学目标选择使用。

本系列教材中的《综合教程》《视听说教程》《阅读教程》可作为主干教材用于基础阶段和提高阶段的教学；《科技英语教程》《人文社科英语教程》《中国文化英语教程》和《西方文化英语教程》可作为提高阶段教材，或作为学生自主学习的拓展资源。

新生英语基础相对较好的高校可加快各基础阶段的教学进度，并补充与主题相关、有助于英语学习的内容；对于新生英语基础相对比较薄弱的高校，建议使用基础阶段教材帮助学生打好语言基本功，再视学生语言能力情况开设拓展课程。

本系列教材在策划和编写过程中得到原上海外语教育出版社社长兼总编辑庄智象教授的全方位支持和专业指导，此外还得到其他多方面的支持，特别是教育部大学外语教学指导委员会、外语界许多知名专家学者、高校一线教师和上海外语教育出版社高等教育事业部的编辑等，在此一并表示衷心的感谢！

由于编者水平所限，编写时间仓促，教材中难免有疏漏与不足，欢迎专家、广大教师和学生批评指正。

Preface

The New Target College English series is the most comprehensive English language textbook series that I have seen. The whole series is based on the new college English curriculum guidelines set by the Ministry of Education, which emphasizes both training in basic skills and the development of cross-cultural awareness and some ESP skills. The contents of the textbooks are ideal for achieving these goals.

There is a primary focus on reading and writing in the Integrated Course but the reading texts also serve as a basis for creative thinking and developing speaking skills. The topics of each unit have been very carefully chosen to reflect the global role that English now plays. I was especially pleased to see that the reading passages were extensive rather than the fashionable short texts that figure in many contemporary textbooks. There is — very rightly — a major emphasis on developing students' vocabulary, including both words and phrases.

The New Target College English series also focuses on academic listening and speaking with the specially designed Video Course. Readings in Western Culture and Readings in Chinese Culture provide extensive reading materials in both Chinese and Western cultures while Readings in Science and Technology and Readings in the Humanities and Social Sciences are designed as ESP materials to enhance students' academic skills in English. This series will appeal to a wide range of teachers with its blend of traditional type and communicative activities.

A key feature of the series is that it aims to cater to the different needs of Chinese students at different levels and locations. There is a rich array of learning activities in each course that will allow teachers the opportunities to select those activities that they consider best suited to their own students. Teachers can also select to use one, two or all of the courses in the complete series based on their students' English proficiency and the aims and objectives of the English curriculum in their own college. My hope, however, is that they will take advantage of the whole series.

The textbook series also takes account of the fact that many Chinese college students will need to use English to further their own academic studies. Thus there are activities specifically directed at the English language skills and strategies that students will need to study through the medium of English.

My lifelong work in second language acquisition points to one key principle that needs to inform the design of language courses — namely, the importance of providing as much input in the second language as possible. Language learning is a slow and gradual process that can only be successful if learners are exposed to massive amounts of input. Most language courses consist only of the main textbooks, which by themselves can never ensure the quantity of input needed to achieve high levels of proficiency. The New Target College English series is a very welcome exception.

I am very happy to endorse the New Target College English series.

编者的话

《视听说教程》根据教育部制定的《大学英语教学指南》编写，结合教育部印发的《高等学校课程思政建设指导纲要》进行修订，旨在培养和提高学生的通用英语交际技能和学术英语听说能力，同时将价值塑造、知识传授和能力培养三者融为一体，使学生在今后学习、工作和社会交往中不仅能用英语进行有效交流，而且能坚定理想信念，树立正确的世界观、人生观和价值观。

一、编写理念及特色

教程在内容上主题广泛、视角多元、选材典型，通过挖掘丰富的视听资源帮助学生丰富学识，增长见识，塑造品格。教程在编写上融合了“多元智力理论”“互动教学法”“任务型教学法”等多种理念，并注重让学生通过自主学习、合作学习和项目学习提高听说能力，培养批判性思维，深刻理解素材内涵。

本教程体现以下特色：

1. 主题广泛有趣　融入思政内容

围绕“了解自我”“了解环境”“了解人际关系”“了解科学与文化”四大主题编写，每册各有侧重，单元话题涵盖政治认同、家国情怀、文化修养、法治意识、道德修养等内容。学习内容的难度逐步进阶，从通用英语过渡到学术英语，符合学生学习需求及认知规律。各单元的主题生动有趣，契合大学生的学习心理，能激发他们的探究欲望。此外，教程的每个单元均包含与中国相关的音视频素材，以增强学生的文化自信，鼓励他们讲好中国故事。

2. 传统与创新相结合的视听练习

除传统视听练习外，还专门设计了练习以帮助学生习得听力素材中一些重要语言形式，包含noticing activities和restructuring activities。前者引导学生关注听力素材中的语言表达，后者对前者进一步拓展和延伸，训练学生灵活运用所学语言的能力。此外，本教程还融入了大学英语四六级改革后的新听力题型，助力学生进一步提升对话、短文、新闻和学术讲座的听力能力，结合大学英语课程特色，培养国际化人才。

3. 真实语境的任务型口语练习

口语技能的训练层层递进，从第一册到第四册分别训练conversational skill、discussion skill、presentation skill和academic presentation skill。口语练习的设计注重语用和情境，通过围绕主题的各类任务来引导和帮助学生在真实语境中运用英语进行交流，听与说有机结合，相互呼应。结合学生实际特点和需求，在口语练习中提供相应的表达和句式为学生提供脚手架。

4. 形式多样的项目学习

项目学习是本教程的另一大特色，其基本理念是创造一个理想的环境，使学生在真实的语境中把本单元所学知识和技能应用于实际任务，这样不仅使学生内化语言知识，巩固学习技能，还将有效培养他们探索、思考、解决问题的能力以及与人协作的能力。在项目任务的设计中注重引导学生发现自我、理解文化、探究世界，形成正确的价值体系。

二、教程结构和单元结构

本教程共四册，每册分八个单元。每单元围绕一个主题提供六段视听材料，视听材料包括校园环境、日常生活、工作场景等，形式丰富多彩，有新闻、独白、电影片段、演讲片段、访谈节目、纪录片等，并以此为基础设计听说活动。

单元结构如下:

1. Famous Quotation

与主题相关的名人名言，以激发学生对本单元主题的兴趣和思考。

2. Lead-in

轻松的视听材料或图片资料，用以引入本单元话题。

3. Listening as Comprehension

结合两则视听素材开展视听练习，侧重对听力材料的理解和听力技巧、笔记技巧等的训练。素材内容体现课程的知识性和人文性。

4. Listening as Acquisition

在理解材料的基础上帮助学生注意和掌握材料中的语音特点、语言形式和语法结构。

5. Speaking for Communication

结合单元主题，创造真实语境开展口语活动，通过输出培养学生的英语应用能力。

6. Further Exploration

包含一则视频素材和三则音频素材。视频素材的选取注重蕴含育人功能，通过对视频内容的逻辑思维分析，有针对性地培养学生的批判性思维能力，在此基础上引导学生基于视频内容进行世界观、人生观和价值观方面的深入思考，发挥课程育人的作用。三则音频素材与大学英语四六级听力题型相对应，篇幅与难度循序渐进，听力内容紧密围绕单元主题，有针对性地提升学生的各项听力技能。

7. Putting into Practice: Project

让学生以小组形式独立完成一个项目，引导学生复习并巩固所学语言知识、语言技能和语言策略，并以过程为导向为学生提供运用所学知识的学习机会，从而促进学生综合能力的提高。项目内容引导学生从了解自我、适应大学环境到理解文化、适应社会、探究世界，将价值观引导贯穿于知识传授和能力培养之中。

8. Goal Checking

学生个人反思本单元所学，与教师（或同伴）交流，教师（或同伴）提供相关指导和帮助。

三、教程使用建议

各高校可根据各自的课堂学时数、具体教学目标以及学生的实际情况有选择地使用视听部分的内容。

对于视听说学时数比较少的学校，课堂上可重点进行Listening as Comprehension和Listening as Acquisition的技能操练，引导学生理解各种技能并运用技能理解听力素材，然后进一步习得与主题相关的语言表达。Speaking for Communication版块的口语活动可以安排学生在课外合作完成。Further Exploration版块的视频内容建议在课堂上完成，其余则由学生课外完成。

对于视听说课学时数比较充裕的学校，除项目学习之外，所有版块内容都可以在课堂上完成。建议学生在一周内完成与本单元主题相关的项目，并在下次课堂上参与汇报和评价，通过这些活动让学生学会自主学习和协作学习。

本教程在编写过程中，经过多次研讨、多方听取意见，反复修改完善。庄智象教授、本系列教材总主编上海外国语大学束定芳教授从宏观策划到具体细节都提出了许多宝贵的意见。编写团队成员都为大学英语一线教师。另外，本教程在编写过程中得到了上海外语教育出版社和华中科技大学外语学院的大力支持，谨在此一并感谢。

由于编者水平有限，教材中难免还存在不少问题与不足，欢迎业内同仁批评指正。

UNIT 1
Personality

Man's main task in life is to give birth to himself, to become what he potentially is. The most important product of his effort is his own personality.

— Erich Fromm
(1900–1980, German-American psychoanalyst)

Lead-in

I. Listen to a song and complete the lyrics.

Reflection

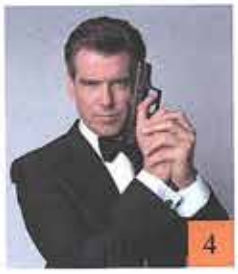

Look at me
You may think you see
Who I really am
But you'll never 1 _____
Every day
It's as if I 2 _____
Now I see
If I 3 _____
I can fool the world
But I cannot fool 4 _____
Who is that girl I see

II. Are you familiar with the characters in the following pictures? Can you use some key words to describe their personalities?

III. Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

2 There is a proverb saying "A man's character is his fate". Do you agree? Why or why not? Choose one of the seven characters as an example to support your ideas.

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: Outline

Outlining, a way to visually represent the relationships between ideas, is useful for organizing notes. When outlining your notes, space and indentation are used to show which ideas are main points and which are supporting details, a method that can help you easily differentiate main points from supporting details. You can also mark your notes with numbers and letters. Usually the Roman numerals (I, II, III, …) will be used as the most important, then followed by the capital letters (A, B, C, …), the Arabic numbers (1, 2, 3, …), and the lower case letters (a, b, c, …).

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Choosing a Topic and a Purpose

One of the most widely recognized difficulties for starting a presentation is choosing a topic. Whatever you want to share, you are supposed to set a basic scope, choose a specific subject, and decide on the purpose of the presentation.

Here are six useful steps to follow to help you choose a topic and a purpose.

Step 1: Choose a broad topic area

There are topics you know a lot about, on which you can speak best, while there are topics you want to know more about, on which you need to do additional research. Choose a broad topic area and brainstorm possible topics according to your knowledge, experience and interests.

Step 2: Identify the context of the presentation

The context is the primary consideration in deciding on a topic. There are various possible contexts in which a speaker can give a presentation: a classroom, a conference room, a corporate meeting room, etc. An appropriate topic should be selected accordingly.

Step 3: Know the audience

There are common characteristics among the audience because that is the reason why they are gathering together in the same context. Knowing the commonalities of the audience is useful in choosing a relevant topic.

Step 4: Choose a purpose

You should choose a specific purpose according to your knowledge of the audience. There are altogether three types of purposes when giving a presentation.

1 To inform. Most presentations are to inform the audience in the room. It is important to give a clear explanation and accurate information on an occasion like reporting the findings of a study, introducing a project and its status, etc.

2 To persuade. A persuasive presentation is used to advocate taking action or finding a solution to a problem. It usually includes reasons, evidence, logic, expected actions and outcomes.

3 To motivate. Motivational presentations are usually exceptionally personal, with strong emotions. They aim to inspire people to make a change and are usually related to somebody's experiences.

Step 5: Narrow down the topics

After analyzing the above factors, you are supposed to carry out further research by looking for the latest news and research findings. You should make sure that key ideas, reasons and facts have been taken into consideration while looking for relevant information. Then narrow down the topics according to the information you've found.

Step 6: Make a list of possible topics and choose a specific one

The last step is to make a final list of the topics by going back to the previous five steps and ask yourself the following questions: Which topic is the most appropriate to the context and the audience? Which topic matches the intended purpose? Which topic is generally thought about and found fascinating? Which topic is hotly debated and will undoubtedly be a group pleaser? Then the topic and the purpose are reasonably chosen.

EXAMPLE

In 2016, Dr. Brian Little, a Cambridge research professor, gave a talk on personality. Let's take his speech "Who Are You, Really? The Puzzle of Personality" as an example to see how a topic and a purpose in a presentation can be selected.

A broad topic area: Dr. Brian Little is an internationally acclaimed scholar and speaker in the field of personality and motivational psychology. Little's book Me, Myself and Us describes his personality theories and offers life-changing advice for readers. Therefore, he chose the area of his expertise as his topic area.

The context: A TED lecture hall is a relatively large room used to deliver powerful talks to spread ideas and seek a deeper understanding of the world. The capacity of lecture halls is usually measured in the hundreds. Dr. Brian Little chose to deliver an impassioned presentation in his specialized field — personality psychology though he himself is an introvert in his daily life.

The audience: The audience members invited to TED Talks are both audience and speakers' community — they are the people speakers are sharing ideas and information with. They can be professional or just interested in an area. In this case, the audience have common interest in personality psychology.

The purpose: The general purpose of TED Talks is to spread ideas, so TED Talks are more likely to be informative. In this presentation, Dr. Brian Little decided to focus on the explanation of concepts.

Narrowed down topics: Dr. Brian Little specialises in personality psychology, which includes three areas of focus — development of an image of the individual and their major psychological procedures; examination of individual psychological differences; examination of human instinct and their psychological similarities. He narrowed down the areas to "psychological procedures of the individual" and "examination of individual psychology differences".

The final topic: He mentioned in his presentation that he had an opportunity to listen to some of the audience's conversations and watch their interaction with each other a couple of days before the presentation. He decided to tell them a few facts and stories in which they might catch a glimpse of themselves. He finally chose to tell the audience why their personality may be more malleable （可塑的） than they think and presented the surprising differences between introverts and extroverts with concrete examples.

Work in groups and choose a specific topic and a purpose for one of the following scenarios.

Scenario A

You have signed up for the course "Psychology". At the end of the term, your professor requires you to give a presentation on the area of "human behaviour" to the whole class. It will be marked as a part of the final score. Now make a decision on your topic and think about how you can develop your presentation.

The theory of the Big Five Personality Traits, also known as the Big Five Model, claims that people can be described with five main characteristics. In this video, the five personality traits are explained through a scenario showing how five characters cope after they are stranded on an island.

I. ▶ Watch a video and match traits A—E to pictures 1—5.

II. ▶ In this video, the speaker explains the theory of the Big Five Personality Traits. Study the following skill on how to define key terms in a lecture or a talk. Then watch the video again and give a definition of each trait.

Critical Thinking Skill: Defining Key Terms

Figuring out and defining key terms clearly and precisely constitutes an important part in understanding a lecture or a talk. When defining key terms, you firstly make sure that you know exactly what the key terms are; secondly, make sure your definition is not ambiguous. We will equip you with some hands-on techniques to help you explain key terms. Here are the steps to follow:

1 Listen to the lecture or the talk and make an outline

In order to catch the key terms, you are supposed to outline the lecture or talk. An outline organizes the information in a structured and logical way. It helps you get the basic structure of the lecture or the talk, so you will have a clearer idea of what it is talking about.

2 Figure out the key terms and their definitions given by the speaker

Key terms are usually presented as the title and subtitles in an outline. They are usually followed by explanations in the form of supporting statements and facts. You can figure out the definitions with the help of those statements and facts.

3 Organize and reconstruct the definitions

Sometimes, the definitions of key terms are not presented straightforwardly in a lecture. You should organize and reconstruct the definitions based on your understanding of the lecture and your background knowledge. Follow the tips below to define the key terms appropriately.

a. Keep your definitions consistent with the speaker's explanations.

b. Remember to focus on what the term exactly refers to, but not its effects or what it is used for. For example, personality can be defined as "individual differences in typical patterns of thinking, feeling, acting and communicating", but not "personality is important in understanding people's thoughts and actions".

c. Define the term with an appropriate sentence pattern. The following sentence patterns may serve as your reference.

It is… It means…

It refers to… It can be defined as…

Putting into Practice: Project

Personalities can be classified according to different models. People with different personalities may demonstrate different patterns of thinking, feeling, acting and communicating. Work in groups and prepare a presentation on "How Students with Different Personalities React".

You may take the following steps:

1 Work in groups and decide on an everyday life situation. Here are some situations college students may encounter:

- Having test anxiety
- Having different opinions from friends
- Joining a student club
- Looking for a part-time job

2 Refer to the theory of the "OCEAN" Model or any other theory you know to make a prediction about how students with different personalities may react to the situation. The following "OCEAN" Model is for your reference.

Students who are	open	may…
	conscientious
	extrovert
	agreeable
	neurotic

3 Carry out a survey by interviewing or observing those students and compare your findings with your prediction. Note down any differences.

Your prediction	Results of your interview or observation

4 Reflect on your research and discuss within the group any inconsistencies you have observed.

Inconsistencies

5 Write a report on your project and present it to the whole class. Remember to explain how and why they react differently.

Note-Taking Skill: Word Map

One way to take good notes is to use word maps. A word map consists of connected circles with key information in them. These circles connect ideas with lines drawn from one circle to another. The large central circle contains the main topic. The outer connected circles contain related subtopics and supporting details. The information usually starts from the centre and moves outward as the information becomes more detailed.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Analysing Your Audience

Self-centred speakers deliver the speech they want to give, without considering who might be the target audience or what they may be thinking, feeling, or wanting. Audience-centred speakers, on the other hand, use words, concepts, stories and visuals which will resonate with the audience and lead them to action. If you aim to be the latter, it's critical that you include audience analysis as part of your speech preparation.

Proper audience analysis will ensure that you deliver the right speech to the right audience. But how do you know what the audience wants to hear? How do you know what will resonate with them? Using the word "A-U-D-I-E-N-C-E" as an acronym, Lenny Laskowski, an international professional speaker, has defined some general audience analysis categories that you might want to add to your repertoire.

Attitude – Do they view your topic favourably, neutrally, or negatively?
Understanding – What do they know about your topic? What don't they know?
Demographics – Who are they? What is their age, gender, educational background?
Interest – Why are they there? Who asked them to be there?
Environment – Where will I stand? Can they all see and hear me?
Needs – What are their needs? What are your needs as the speaker?
Challenges – What challenges or problems do they have related to your topic?
Expectations – What do they expect to learn or hear from you?

Now that you are clear about what audience analysis is, you may wonder how to improve your presentation based on your audience analysis. Here are eight actions you can take:

1 Dress like your audience.
This will help you fit in with them. Dressing significantly better or significantly worse than your audience makes you appear like an outsider.

2 Choose a presentation format appropriate to your audience and the event.
Sometimes slides are necessary; sometimes not. Sometimes you need a lengthy Q&A; sometimes not. Some people expect a traditional lecture; some expect the opposite. Whatever you choose, you might want to take your audience's needs and expectations into account.

3 Select the supporting details which will have the greatest impact on your audience.
Will your audience be persuaded more by a financial argument or an environmental one? Do they value simplicity more than convenience? When choosing which supporting details to keep, consider those which your audience will find most persuasive.

4 Draw upon sources your audience recognize.
To maximize the impact of quotations, examples, and other supporting materials, draw from sources that your audience know and (hopefully) respect.

5 Choose stories which will resonate with your audience.
Stories bring tremendous benefits in your presentations, but you'll lose much of the impact if your audience don't identify with the hero in some way.

6 Design visuals that impact your audience.
If you want to trigger emotions, select the images which may impact your audience most. If you are using charts or diagrams, choose those which will answer the questions your audience might have.

7 Use words which match your audience's vocabulary.
This applies to both what you say and what you present on your visuals.

8 Customize your call-to-action for your audience.
To maximize the likelihood that your audience take action, make sure your call-to-action is tailored to them given their strengths and resources.

Remember the time you invest in audience analysis will save your time later on preparing your presentation, and make your presentation more effective.

EXAMPLE

Yang Lan, a leading television anchor in China, served as a Goodwill Ambassador for Beijing's bidding for the 2008 Olympic Games and one of the speakers in the final presentation to the International Olympic Committee in Moscow, where Beijing won the bidding. She delivered a wonderful speech featuring China's cultural program of the bidding. Let's take her speech as an example to see how audience analysis works wonders in a speech.

The audience: The International Olympic Committee who was present at the event and the audience around the world watching the event through television broadcasting.

Audience's needs: To evaluate whether China was capable of hosting the 2008 Olympic Games.

How Yang dresses: A Cheongsam-style formal suit that was appropriate for the event.

Presentation format: Considering this was an event of a large gathering, she chose PowerPoint presentation.

Selecting persuasive supporting details: In the body part, she elaborated on why Beijing is the right choice by describing what Beijing is like: "a modern metropolis with 3,000 years of cultural treasures woven into the urban tapestry"; what Beijing people are like: friendly people who are eager to welcome their friends from around the world; what cultural events Beijing will be offering.

Drawing upon sources the audience recognize: In the introduction part, she took cuju, the origin of ancient football, as an example to show China's long history of and fascination with sports. As for the torch relay route, she used the famed Silk Road to bring together the unique heritage of Chinese culture and that of the Olympic movement.

Choosing stories that resonate with the audience: She ended her speech with the story of Marco Polo to show that what Beijing is able to offer is far beyond what the speech could contain.

Designing visuals that impact the audience: Pictures that demonstrate some of the oldest civilization, such as Greek, Roman, Egyptian, Byzantine, Mesopotamian, Persian, Arabian, Indian and Chinese as well as some of the key spots in China were shown when the speaker was explaining the torch relay route.

Language use: In the approximate 4-minute speech, her language is easy to follow, clear, yet powerful. She talked about concrete facts and examples rather than abstract ideas.

Customizing the call-to-action: She promised the audience a good time in Beijing at the very beginning of the speech to arouse the audience's interest. At the very end of the speech, she reiterated the message that Beijing was ready for the hosting and asked them to "come and join us".

I. Cosmetic surgery is getting more and more popular these days. Some people believe that it is a science to enhance the beauty of a person, while others argue against it saying it will only lead to negative consequences. What's your opinion on cosmetic surgery? Work in groups and present your ideas on whether cosmetic surgery is good or bad.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Group discussion

Discuss in groups and decide your group's position. Do some research and collect as much information (such as statistics, stories, research findings) as you can to support your position. The evidence below may serve as your reference.

Supporting evidence for cosmetic surgery:

Freedom of choice

Improved confidence

Psychological benefits

Improved quality of life

Counter-evidence for cosmetic surgery:

Expense

Chance of addiction

Failure to meet expectations

Health risks

Step 2 Analysis of your target audience

Each group will be assigned a specific group of target audience (teenagers / teenagers' parents / cosmetic industry practitioners and manufacturers / cosmetic surgeons). Prepare your presentation based on what you've learned from the above audience analysis.

Step 3 Presentation

Each group will prepare an oral presentation about its group discussion and findings. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on whether the presentations are effective to their target audience. After all presentations are finished, the whole class should vote for the most convincing presentation.

Beauty has become such a chronic focus for many people nowadays that it directs them away from other more important goals in life. In this video, Dr. Engeln, a psychology professor and body image researcher, explores the concept of beauty sickness.

I. ▶ Watch a video and choose the best answers.

Beauty sickness is what happens when women are busy worrying about _____ instead of _____.

A. their education
B. their weight-loss goals
C. their family
D. the state of their arms
E. the state of their thighs
F. the state of the environment
G. the state of the world
H. their career goals
I. their skin care regime
J. their relationships
K. the state of their abs
L. the state of economy

II. ▶ In this video, Dr. Engeln shares some provoking ideas about beauty sickness. Study the following skill on how to put the given information into your own words. Then watch the video again and retell the given information.

Critical Thinking Skill: Putting the Given Information into Your Own Words

You must have the experience of retelling a story to your friends. And when you do that, you recount the storyline, the events, the characters and the main points in your own words. Can you retell a lecture or a talk? We will equip you with some hands-on techniques to help you put the given information into your own words. Here are the steps to follow:

1 Listen to the information and take notes.

In order to retell, you must first understand the listening materials. Taking notes not only helps you stay focused, it also alleviates part of your memory load. So far you're already familiar with taking notes using an outline and a word map. Choose the one as you see fit. One thing to remember is that instead of copying the words or expressions verbatim, you are encouraged to rephrase what you're hearing.

2 Organize your notes and prepare for the retelling.

As you organize your notes, highlight the key ideas you hear and sort out the structure by identifying the trunk (core topic), the branch (supporting ideas/statements), and the leaves (details).

3 Put the given information into your own words.

As you retell, the main ideas need to come through, but the wording has to be your own. Here are some techniques to use when paraphrasing:

- Use synonyms (words that mean the same)

While obesity does bring its own health risks to an individual, body shaming can be no less detrimental to a person's health, especially among adolescents who struggle with confidence.	We cannot deny the negative impact obesity has on people's health. However, body shaming is capable of exerting the same amount of harm, if not more. And this is particularly true when it comes to teenagers who lack confidence.

Putting into Practice: Project

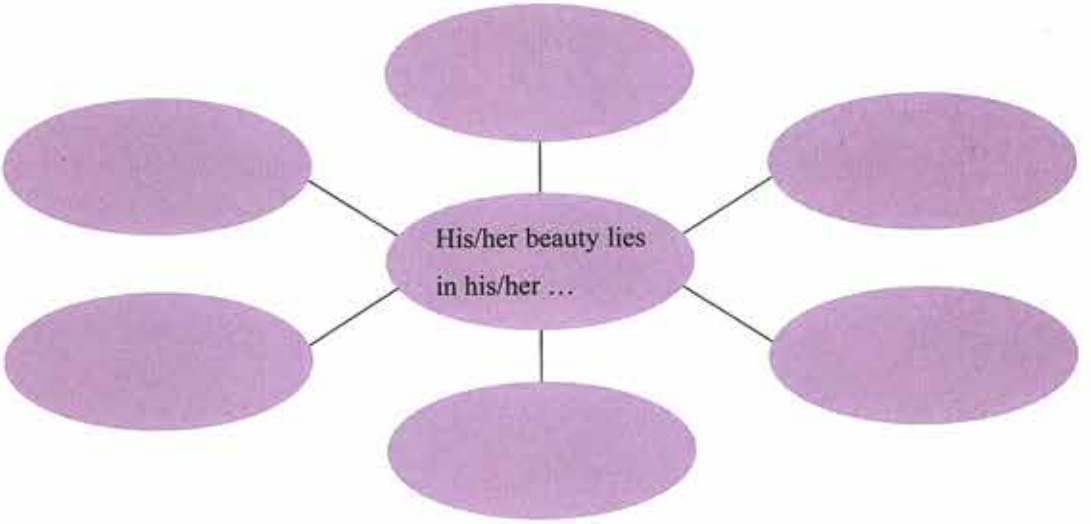

What is beauty? Beauty isn't about having a pretty face. It is about having a pretty mind, a pretty heart, and most importantly, a beautiful soul. China is never short of such beautiful souls. Work in groups and present a figure in China who embodies the essence of beauty.

You may take the following steps:

1 Discuss in groups and decide on the figure your group would like to present. The person can be a household name or someone unknown to the public. You may consider the following questions in your discussion:

- Who is he/she?
- What makes him/her beautiful in your point of view?
- What inspiration can you draw from his/her life story?

2 Work in groups and collect as much information as possible about the person you have chosen. As you brainstorm, you may use a word map to help you generate ideas more effectively.

3 Give an audience-centred presentation. Your target audience is supposed to be your college counterparts in Western countries who may not have a good knowledge of Chinese culture. You may consider the following aspects in particular.

- Selecting persuasive supporting details
- Drawing upon sources the audience recognize
- Choosing stories that resonate with the audience

4 All the groups work together, record a video entitled "Beautiful Souls in China" and upload it online.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Organizing and Outlining a Presentation

When preparing a presentation, you need to decide what you will say in the introduction, how you will organize the main points and supporting details in the body, and what you will say in the conclusion. Regarding the main points and supporting details, the type of presentation you are giving — informational, persuasive, or explanatory — will determine which organizational pattern to use. Here are the main organizational patterns, along with an explanation of how each is employed.

- The comparison/contrast pattern works well with two different (or similar) subjects. It is effective for an informational presentation but can also help you persuade the audience to make a choice.
- The pattern following the order of importance allows you to present your ideas, moving from the least to the most important or vice versa. It may be used for either informational or persuasive presentations.
- Cause/effect and problem/solution patterns are all-purpose structures used to explain or inform. They also add a lot of power to the persuasive presentation.
- Patterns following the chronological order or the order of location are also helpful.

Well-organized information is the key to a successful presentation. If your audience can easily follow your thoughts, you will probably get positive feedback.

After deciding how to organize your presentation, you may outline it to get a clear picture of the whole structure. An outline includes the title, specific purpose, central idea, introduction, main points, subpoints, connectives and conclusion.

EXAMPLE

An eco-city, or a green city is an ecologically healthy city. In the future, the cities in which we live must enable people to thrive in harmony with nature and achieve sustainable development. Therefore, many countries have been undertaking practical measures to build eco-cities in order to realize the goal. In the presentation "What Is an Eco-city", the speaker gives suggestions from three aspects: sustainable housing, modes of transportation and electrical distribution. Let's take the presentation as an example to see how it is organized.

1 Introduction: The presentation is started with a description of the problems of living in the city: "We live in a world filled with immense, vibrant, noisy, overpopulated cities"; "Now our urban model seems to have reached its limits", which shows that the presentation adopts the problem/solution pattern and aims to explain and inform.

2 Main point: "In order to solve the living problems, new model is developing". The speaker explains how the new model works with three subpoints: "three major challenges need to be addressed", and then gives a more detailed explanation for each of the subpoints.

A. Subpoint: "We must transform the buildings". In order to explain how to make the specific "transformation", the speaker focuses on "how buildings in the eco-city put energy efficiency first" by giving creative energy saving plans.

B. Subpoint: "Radically change our modes of transport". A new "multimodal mode" is provided so that it could not only associate the changes made in housing but also bring the changes to the supply of electricity.

C. Subpoint: "Implement new ways of supplying electricity". As a basis for the realization of all changes, the speaker explains how "smart grids" could drive the growth of electrical infrastructure in an eco-city.

3 Conclusion: The presentation is ended with a brief comment on the three subpoints: "energy that's consumed, produced and shared by all of us more intelligently than ever before". And it also presents a product to the audience to add its power in persuasion.

I. Suppose you are a member in the city government that has decided to develop Green Town into a better place for people to live in and visit. Read the map and follow the steps below. Work in groups and present your ideas on how to develop Green Town.

Step 2 Group discussion

Compare and discuss all the proposals the group members have provided and then vote for the best two proposals.

Step 3 Presentation

Choose one student from your group to present your proposals to the class. Use organizational patterns you have just learned, such as order of importance, cause and effect, or comparison and contrast, to organize the body of your presentation.

Your presentation may follow the outline below:

You use paper towels to dry your hands every day, but chances are, you're doing it the wrong way. In this enlightening and funny short talk, Joe Smith reveals the key to reducing the usage of paper towels.

I. ▶ Watch the video and circle the best answer.

1 If we could reduce the usage of paper towels, one paper towel per person per day, 571,230,000 pounds of (wood / paper / wool) not used.
2 Why 12? Twelve apostles, twelve tribes, twelve zodiac signs, twelve months. The one I like the best: It's the biggest number with one (pronunciation / syllable / spelling).
3 You know the funny thing is, I get my hands (quicker / drier / wetter) than people do with three or four, because they can't get in between the cracks.

II. ▶ In this video, Joe Smith shares an environment-friendly way to use paper towels in daily life. Study the following skill on how to identify different modes of presenting information. Then watch the video again and answer the questions.

Critical Thinking Skill: Identifying Different Modes of Presenting Information

There are generally five types of modes to present information: linguistic, visual (symbolic), aural (oral), spatial, and gestural. Many speakers often use more than one mode to convey their central message effectively. Identifying different modes of presenting information helps the audience gain an in-depth understanding of the presentation.

1 Linguistic Mode

The linguistic mode refers to the speaker's use of language. This mode involves word choice, and the organization of words into sentences and paragraphs. It is the most widely used mode, and the best way to share details.

2 Visual (symbolic) Mode

The visual mode refers to the images and characters that the audience see. This mode often involves the use of visual aids such as pictures, PowerPoint slides etc. The visual mode is used in order to instruct, persuade, entertain, or express feelings etc. It also does a good job of presenting details.

3 Aural (oral) Mode

The aural mode focuses on sounds including but not limited to music, sound effects, ambient sounds, silence, and the speaker's tone of voice and accent.

4 Spatial Mode

The spatial mode often refers to the arrangement of elements in space. It involves the organization of different items and the physical closeness between people and objects. A good example of the spatial mode might be the different ways in which chairs and desks are arranged in a room.

5 Gestural Mode

The gestural mode refers to the way body movements are used. Facial expressions, hand gestures, body language and interaction between the speaker and audience are all gestural modes.

While you are watching or listening to something, try to identify the modes that have been used and figure out how and why they are used. This will definitely help you become a smart information consumer in the Information Age.

A. Paper towels .....

B. "Really loud." .....

C. Green background .....

D. "Now, there's now a real fancy invention, it's the one where you wave your hand and it kicks it out." .....

E. "Shake", "Fold" .....

1) If we could reduce the usage of paper towels, one paper towel per person per day, 571,230,000 pounds of paper not used.

.....

2) Why 12? Twelve apostles, twelve tribes, twelve zodiac signs, twelve months.

.....

3) How? As soon as it starts, you just tear it off. It's smart enough to stop. And you get half a towel.

Putting into Practice: Project

Everyone needs a garden. In order to live a greener life, you could start by designing your own living space. You don't need a land to grow plants and flowers — even the smallest space can bring vigour to your life with a bit of planning. Work in groups and present a design of a green working or living space.

You may take the following steps:

1 Discuss in groups and draw a sketch of a green space. You may consider the following questions in discussion:

- Where is this space and what is it used for?
- What will you do to make it greener?
- What are the benefits of doing so?

2 Use an outline to organize your description of the space.

3 Find someone who knows gardening or planting to evaluate the feasibility of the design.

4 Present the design to the whole class. And the whole class will vote for "the most desirable green space". Here is a reference checklist for the most desirable green space:

- ☐ It could help reduce carbon emissions and make the air cleaner.
- ☐ It could make people feel more relaxed.
- ☐ It could promote mental and physical health.
- ☐ It doesn't consume too much time and energy to maintain.

Here are some tips on growing vegetables even on the tiniest spot:

Windowsill

Choose windowsills that get plenty of sun — five hours a day or more during summer preferably.

Balcony

Plants will get weak if they haven't got enough space.

Patch

Make the most of even a tiny patch and you'll be surprised at how much veg you'll be able to grow.

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: Key Words

When you listen to a speech or a lecture, there will always be important vocabulary that you need to recognize and understand. Key words contain the essence of communication. They are the specific content words, i.e. technical words that are related to the subject, such as names, numbers, dates and places. By noting down these key words and the relationships between them, you can take effective notes.

Example

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Beginning and Ending a Presentation

How to begin a presentation?

As an old saying goes, a good beginning is half done. You should focus on the beginning of your presentation because many studies show that if you can capture your audience's interest straight away, there's a good chance they will listen to the rest of the presentation. If you don't, the majority of listeners will focus on something else.

In order to capture the interest of your audience and engage them, you may use the following techniques to begin your presentation:

1 Shock the audience

You can show a funny video, use a prop, or compare something contradictory to shock your audience so that they will remain engaged because they like the surprise or they find it interesting.

2 Ask the audience to "imagine" or think "what if"

Asking your audience to imagine something or think "what if" gets them to visualise and use their imagination. You can use this technique to evoke certain emotions which you yourself have experienced over the same thing. It's a great way to keep people listening as they are now emotionally involved in what you're saying.

3 Quote someone or a proverb

If you're struggling to create a strong opening, you may consider quoting someone. Be careful that the quote must be meaningful and relevant to the audience and the purpose of your presentation.

4 Tell a story or reference a historical event

You can start with a story to highlight why your topic is significant. The audience are more likely to respond better to and remember this story than a list of facts. At the same time, well-known historical events are good reference points, both to illustrate a point, and to get the audience to use their imagination.

5 Share personal stories

As aforementioned, the audience enjoy hearing stories and they're even more interested when the story is directly about the speaker, because they get to see the human side of you. Consider telling a story about a mistake you made or when life wasn't going that well. People will relate to this as we all have experienced mistakes and failures. The more the audience relate to you, the more likely they will remain engaged.

6 Ask the audience questions

You can conduct polls or ask questions to make your audience think and feel invested in your presentation. You may ask a direct question such as "What would you do in this situation?" to mentally stimulate your audience, or a rhetorical question such as "Is the Pope catholic" to capture the attention of your audience.

7 Use statistics

You can begin by sharing surprising statistics which you can personalise to the audience for a larger impact, for example, you could say "In this room, over 70% of us are going to ..." or "Look to the person on your left ..." The audience should be shocked when you provide them with the actual statistics.

How to end a presentation?

By the end of your presentation, you want your audience to have understood the purpose of your message. You should bring them back to the core of your speech. Hammer home your main point and let that single, strong message be the last thing they hear from you. Make it memorable and powerful.

There are four parts to a compelling end of a presentation:

1 To signal the end

You have to let people know you're wrapping up. That's why people say "in conclusion", or "in summary" or "to bring things to a close". Your audience are going to be reassured that you're ending in a very obvious and organized way.

2 To summarize the key takeaway

You have to boil down your whole presentation into one crystallized sentence. You've probably had a theme driving through the whole thing up till now and this is your last chance to share that key takeaway in one sentence.

3 To give a call to action

After you've shared with your audience all your content and your core message, they should feel inspired. Embrace that motivation with a call to action. Invite your listeners to act upon your story and presentation. Let them be part of the change in the future. Speak with passion at the end of your presentation.

4 To echo the beginning

The end is where you share one last story, one last compelling statistic, or give your audience a little bit of an inspirational quote to finish things off. Oftentimes you can build on whatever you did in the very opening of your presentation. You grab their attention some way in the introduction and you can echo that in your ending.

I. Watch a video clip from Melinda Gates' Ted Talk in 2012 and answer the following questions by referring to the techniques introduced above on how to begin and end a presentation.

Background: The topic of contraception has become controversial in recent years. But should it be? Melinda Gates, the co-chair of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, believes that many of the world's social change issues depend on ensuring that women are able to control their rate of having kids. In this significant presentation, she says that making sure all women have access to birth control must become "a total priority" for countries both rich and poor.

1 Why does Melinda Gates use both "controversial" and "uncontroversial" to talk about birth control?
2 Why does Melinda Gates show a picture of her and her husband Bill Gates?
3 What's your impression of Melinda Gates' presentation when you hear the number "one billion"?
4 What's the purpose of Melinda Gates saying "I think the goal here is really clear"?
5 What's the purpose of Melinda Gates saying "We can do our part …" and "We need to start now"?
6 How does Melinda Gates echo the beginning in the ending of her presentation?

II. A recent survey of college admissions officers suggests that community service can be a "tie-breaker" between applicants who are equally qualified. What are the benefits of community service? How can students get involved in community service? And how can you encourage people around you to better engage in community service? Prepare a speech and present it in your class. Try your best to begin your presentation strongly and end it powerfully.

To develop sustainably is to consider and manage the social, economical and environmental impacts of our built environment. In this video, we'll get to know the key components to sustainable development and how to create quality communities.

I. ▶ Watch the video and complete the outline below.

Creating Sustainable Communities

Goal: To create quality communities which 1 _____ and are 2 _____.

Measures: To consider and manage the social, economical and environmental impacts of our built environment.

Specific key components:

— Choosing 3 _____
— Working with 4 _____
— Meeting 5 _____

II. ▶ In this video, the speaker explains how to create sustainable communities. Study the following skill on generating innovative solutions. Then watch the video again and analyse the innovative strategies to achieve sustainable development.

Critical Thinking Skill: Generating Innovative Strategies

Critical thinking involves a combination of complex skills for a higher level of thinking. It is a self-directed thinking process that produces new and innovative ideas and solutions to problems. You have to define the problem at hand, gather information from all the available sources, list possible solutions, analyse them and implement them to achieve the desired effect.

To generate innovative strategies, you may follow the steps below:

1 Understand and define your problems or goals

Start identifying your goals, desires or challenges and define your objectives clearly for clarity. Gather data about the problem instead of making wild assumptions. Formulate open-ended questions and visualize the challenges and opportunities regarding the problem.

2 Use the existing resources more productively to generate ideas

You can use brainstorming, brain writing, mind mapping or other forms of idea generating techniques. When you get tired of the process, take a break and return with fresh ideas.

3 Evaluate the solution to the problem

Now your focus shifts to the evaluation of all the ideas you have generated. Analyse the potential solutions, and think of the rationale behind the implementation of the solution.

4 Work in groups and generate innovative strategies

Now you can plan the course of action for the implementation stage. Identify your resources, communicate with your team members and explain everything to them so as to get an innovative and overall solution to your problem or generate innovative strategies to achieve your goal.

Understand and define the problem/goal

Creating sustainable communities

Use the existing resources more productively to generate ideas

There are three key components:

- Key Component 1
  - — Location, infrastructure and 1 _____ are fundamental;
  - — Some sites are better suited to sustainable, 2 _____ communities.
- Key Component 2
  - — Environmental management considers 3 _____ between the various factors associated with development; the relationship between land, water and the built environment and 4 _____.
- Key Component 3
  - — We are faced with increasing energy costs and diminishing 5 _____;
  - — Energy efficiency is fundamental in creating sustainable communities;
  - — Energy efficiency can be supported by 6 _____.

Evaluate the solution to the problem

To evaluate the solution, you may ask yourself some questions:

7 Is the solution practical?

8 Are there any concrete measures?

Work in groups and generate innovative strategies

9 Can you generate innovative strategies to achieve the goal of creating quality communities?

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

Putting into Practice: Project

It's better to give than to receive! Volunteering is a way to spread your love, kindness and generosity to those in need by providing help or services. Suppose your local school needs some volunteers. Work in groups and try to apply for a volunteering position to help your local community.

You may take the following steps:

1 Discuss in groups what qualifications might be needed for volunteers at your local school and what qualifications you may have.

2 Consider your availability by taking into consideration your course arrangement and plans for private life. You may ask yourself the following questions:

- How much time do I have to spend on my study weekly?
- How much time do I need for my private life, such as sports, entertainment, etc.?
- What can I do if, there are clashes in my timetable?

3 Check the tasks listed in the picture and discuss with your group members which one interests you most and why. If you are interested in none of them, what else would you like to do?

4 Prepare a presentation applying for a volunteering position. You may include the following factors in your presentation:

- Why you want this volunteering position;
- What qualifications you have for this volunteering position;
- What tasks you are going to take and why;
- What possible problems you may encounter and how you will overcome them;
- What you expect to gain from this volunteering experience.

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: The Paragraph Method

Some students may prefer to take notes in the form of paragraphs. Writing notes as paragraphs doesn't mean you will create your own original paragraph or write down every word that the speaker is saying. Instead, you simply write shorter paragraphs with only the key information that you hear.

Let's suppose the following paragraph is what you hear:

Social networking sites set platforms for one person to meet up with other people on the Internet. People use social networking sites for meeting new friends, finding old friends, or locating people who have the same problems or interests. More and more relationships and friendships are being formed online and then carried to an offline setting. Psychologist Witte says that in less than 10 years, online dating will be the predominant way for people to start a relationship. One online dating site claims that 2% of all marriages begin at its site, the equivalent of 236 marriages a day. Other sites claim one in five relationships begin online. Most sites are free, allowing younger people with stricter budgets to enjoy some of the same features as those of adults who are more likely to be able to afford pay-based sites.

The notes taken in the paragraph form can be as follows:

Social networking sites — for finding friends, locating people with same problems / interests on the Internet. More relationships & friendships formed online, carried offline. Witte: in less than 10 years online dating to be predominant. One site says 2% of all marriages begin at its site. Another says 1/5 of all relationships begin online. Most sites free.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Using Voice Effectively

The voice is one of the most powerful tools you have to inspire and influence others. It is also a tool that often is unconsciously misused. The voice has the ability to convey emotion, to give directions, to inspire and motivate others, to make things happen, to attract people or to discourage people.

There are things you can do consciously to make certain your voice matches what you say. Improving the basic qualities of vocal expression: power, pace, pitch and the use of pause, serves to enhance your image and credibility, and helps listeners to focus on your message. Let's take a closer look at each of these important skills.

The Four Ps of Vocal Expressiveness

Power refers to volume — how loudly or softly you speak. You want to ensure that you're clearly heard and understood everywhere in the room. In addition, your volume should reflect the emotion of your presentation. For example, if your goal is to "rally the troops", then you'll naturally raise the volume of your voice to underscore a key sentence. In English, volume can indicate several different things:

- Emphasis — if a speaker thinks he or she is saying something important, the speaker would probably say it louder. In the middle of a paragraph at normal volume, a sentence spoken more loudly stands out.
- Strong emotion — if a speaker has a very strong opinion on something, his or her volume will probably increase. This is true whether the emotion is positive or negative. People shout when they're angry, but also when they're excited.
- Certainty — people who are sure of their opinions tend to speak more loudly. On the other hand, people who aren't confident tend to speak more quietly.

Tip: If you're concerned that you may not be heard across the room, simply ask someone to raise a hand if they're having difficulty hearing you. Listeners will be happy to help — and may even pay closer attention to what you're saying!

Pace is how quickly or slowly you speak. Pace is influenced by:

- The complexity of your subject
- The size of the audience/room
- Your ability to articulate

Many people speak too fast during presentations, especially when they are nervous or unprepared. In general, any change from a steady speaking pace indicates that something important is going on. Slowing down can indicate emphasis because it's a sign that the speaker wants you to pay attention to every single word. While speeding up can indicate strong emotion because English speakers tend to talk faster when they get excited about something.

Tip: An unvaried pace can sound monotone. Try to mix it up a bit, which keeps listeners engaged and highlights key parts of your presentation.

Pitch is your tone of voice, meaning how high or low the speaker's voice is. Rising pitch toward the end of a sentence in English generally indicates a question, as in "Did you get the milk?" But, if a speaker's voice rises toward the end of all his sentences, even when they aren't questions, it can show uncertainty. For example: "I was thinking about the book we read for class, and I thought maybe James isn't supposed to be the villain...? Maybe he's supposed to be morally gray...? He's not good or bad...?"

Moreover, many speakers do not communicate their feelings adequately because they do not vary their pitch and rhythm enough. A natural, conversational tone provides vocal variety and helps you make an emotional connection with your audience.

Tip: Being conversational means sounding friendly, using contractions and short words, avoiding jargon — in essence, using the everyday approach of talking with a friend.

Pause refers to the spaces between sentences, phrases or words. Pauses serve as verbal "punctuation marks" that:

- Give the audience time to think about what you've said
- Add variety and provide a break to keep listeners attentive
- Provide time for you to breathe and speak at a controlled pace

If you're afflicted with the "ums," "ahs" or "you knows," conscious pauses are also the best way to start eliminating these useless fillers.

Tip: Start adding pauses to your presentations by taking a breath at the end of every major phrase or sentence.

By following the four Ps, you'll leverage one of the most powerful and unique tools you have — your voice. To use the power, pace, pitch, and pause effectively is a great starting place to carry your message clearly to others. Practice with awareness. You'll soon find others are hanging on your every word!

II. Choose a prevalent gender equality problem and give a speech to explain why it is urgent to solve the problem and how to tackle the problem. Make sure you use the four Ps effectively.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Identifying

Brainstorm the most relevant issues about gender equality. Choose the one that you are most interested in. The issues below may serve as your reference:

Gender pay gap

Bias at workplace

Women leadership

Labor division

Political rights

Step 2 Analysing

Having pinpointed the problem, you may do some research to illustrate the necessity and urgency of the problem. And then figure out some corresponding solutions to deal with it. The sample below may serve as your reference.

Research:

According to the UN Women report Turning promises into action: Gender equality in the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development (2018), it is women who are the first to go hungry when there isn't enough food in the house. They are also the ones who are paid the least: the salary gap worldwide is 23%. In the public sphere, they hold only 23.7% of political posts. ...

Solutions/plans:

Giving girls access to education

Resisting traditional gender roles

Changing stereotypes in the mass media

Giving women platforms to be in power and achieve economic success

Making flexibility and work-life balance a part of the wider company culture

Step 3 Applying

Organize your speech with the paragraph method. And then use the skill of four Ps to deliver your speech. Your ability to use the power, pace, pitch and pause will be assessed. The outline below may serve as your reference.

Topic: .....

Introduction: Probably no country in the world has reached equality between men and women. The truth is, there is one problem worth mentioning about gender equality. Today, I would like to talk about .....

Solution: How can we put an end to .....?

Conclusion: .....

Note: When stating the topic sentence and raising questions, you may speak louder, slow down a bit and pause for impact. Try to sound more natural by varying your pitch and rhythm. Make sure your voice is loud enough for everyone in the room.

Making it to the top of a profession has never been easy for women. Facebook COO Sheryl Sandberg looks at why a smaller percentage of women than men reach the top of their professions.

I. ▶ Watch the video and identify the speaker's purpose of giving the speech and her attitude towards women today.

Purpose of the speech: .....

The speaker's attitude towards women today: .....

.....

II. ▶ In this video, Sheryl Sandberg explains why a smaller percentage of women than men reach the top of their professions. Study the following skill on how to identify the recurrent themes. Then watch the video again and write down the recurrent themes of Sheryl Sandberg's speech.

Critical Thinking Skill: Identifying Recurrent Themes

A recurrent theme is a message that can be revisited for many times. Whether you're having a conversation in real life or listening to a passage on a test, knowing how to identify recurrent themes is key to actually understanding what the other person is trying to say. A recurrent theme is the most important concept of the passage as a whole. Once you understand the main point, all the details will fall into place, but without the main points, nothing really makes sense.

Many of you might struggle with this because you think you need to understand every single word and detail to know what a speaker is saying. Then, you get so nervous and frantic about remembering every little thing that you completely lose sight of the recurrent theme. In this section, you'll get some tips for avoiding this problem so you can stay focused on the main point.

1 Using word chains

One tool you can use when you're trying to get the main point is word chains, sequences of similar or related words repeated throughout the speech. This is especially true when you're listening to something that the speaker has prepared in advance, like a lecture for a class. Here's an example:

Professor: Good morning, class. Today we're talking about King Cyrus: specifically what kind of a leader is he? At some points, we see Cyrus talking to his generals and discussing what to do, which is what we think of as good leadership, but we also see him bribing his subordinates and tricking them into doing things. So, what kind of leadership is this? Is this the way we would expect a king to behave? Or, is it okay because Cyrus is a military commander in the middle of a war?

In this passage, you can hear that "leadership", "leader", and related words are repeated several times. The same thing happens with the name "Cyrus". This creates a chain of words, linking everything together: this is a lecture about King Cyrus and leadership.

Listening for identifying these word chains is a great way to get the overall topic of a passage, or what the whole passage is about. If you've really identified the topic, you should be able to find related words scattered all throughout the passage, not just in one section or another.

Once you've identified the topic, you can ask yourself: "what is the speaker saying about the topic?" The answer to this question will be: the main points of the passage. In this case, the professor is introducing some questions about King Cyrus and leadership.

2 Paying attention to the beginning and the end of a speech

Word chains are helpful, but they aren't the only way to listen for the recurrent theme of a speech. Paying attention to the beginning and the end of a speech is also effective. At the beginning, speakers will downright tell you what they want to talk about and why, and at the end, many people will recap by repeating their theme. For examples:

Tom: Good morning, Joe. Can we talk about the printer repair for a minute?

It's a good bet that the topic of this passage will be printer repair. Then, you just have to ask yourself: "what is Tom saying about the printer repair?" and you'll have his main point.

Or

Greg: So, just to sum up, today we talked about bibliography sessions and why they're helpful when you're writing your papers.

Greg's topic was probably something like "bibliography sessions are helpful". Also, the summary is a great way to check whether you've got the recurrent theme right.

In a nutshell, it is important to pay attention to the introductory words, repeated words, concluding words because they are likely to signal the recurrent themes of the speech. Here is a list of them.

- Introductory words — Give a basic introduction of the theme

  Today, we are going to discuss ...

  After today, you should be able to ...

  Generally, ...

  First, ...

  Finally, ...

  Well, ...

- Repeated words / word chains — Rephrase and clarify the information

  In other words ...

  This simply means ...

  In essence ...

- Concluding words — Recap and restate the theme

  In a nutshell, ...

  To sum up, ...

  Today, we talked about ...

  In conclusion, ...

In Sheryl Sandberg's speech:

- Introductory words

  We still have a 1 _____, and it's 2 _____.

  And the problem is …

  The problem is that …

- Repeated words / word chains

  Problem: 3 _____ / top of profession / women not at the top /

  … not led by women;

  Women underestimating their ability;

  Women not 4 _____ salary;

  Women's 5 _____ / doing a good job / getting promotion

- Concluding words

  It matters a lot because 6 _____

  _____.

  We've got to get women to 7 _____.

The recurrent theme of Sheryl Sandberg's speech: 8 _____

_____.

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

1 What kinds of evidence did the speaker use to support her views in her speech? Do you think her evidence is powerful enough to prove her views? Why or why not?

2 Besides the factors mentioned in her speech, what other reasons can you think of that might contribute to women not making it to the top?

Putting into Practice: Project

Gender equality means equal rights and opportunities for women and men in all areas of life as well as preventing systemic discrimination against both genders. The journey towards gender equality might be long. Where are we now? Work in groups and prepare a presentation on "To What Extent Has Gender Equality Been Achieved?"

You may take the following steps:

1 Work in groups and share your own views on "To What Extent Has Gender Equality Been Achieved?" Try to include as many areas as possible. The following areas are for your reference:

- Educational opportunity
- Right to vote
- Economic status
- Promotion opportunity
- Family status
- Cultural status

2 Search online for data and examples to supplement your previous views or knowledge of gender equality.

3 Try to interview people of different age groups. The following questions are for your reference. Then try to identify recurrent themes in the interview:

Questions	Recurrent themes in respondents' answers
• What is the role of gender equality? • What is your attitude towards gender equality? • In which areas has gender equality been achieved? • In which areas does gender inequality still exist? • Have you benefited from gender equality or suffered from gender inequality? Give examples. • What do you think government should do to promote gender equality? • Do you have a role in developing gender equality? If yes, what is it?

4 Analyse the themes and prepare an oral report about your findings from the online search and your interview. Then present your report to the whole class.

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: Noting Causes and Effects

A cause is an action or event that makes something else happen. An effect is what happens because of a certain action or event. Sometimes the effect can be stated before the cause.

Examples:

It began to rain outside (cause), so I took my umbrella when I left for work (effect).

I took my umbrella to work (effect) due to/as a result of the rain outside (cause).

The following are expressions used to indicate cause-and-effect relationships:

Cause	Effect
Because/Owing to/Thanks to …	So/Thus/Therefore
This is due to …	Consequently/Accordingly
This comes from (the fact that) …	One effect of this is …
One explanation/source is …	This leads to/results in/produces/makes …
That's why …	After/If [cause], then …
That's for a reason.	as a result (of)…

Taking notes of causes and effects often involves the following steps:

- Listen for the discourse markers or expressions that can alert you to a cause-and-effect relationship.
- Take note of these causes and effects in shorthand or with symbols that are clear and understandable to you. For example:

  ∴ therefore ∵ because b/c because → cause/lead to/result in e.g. smoking → cancer. (Or cancer ← smoking)

  (For clarity, an arrow should always point toward the effect.)
- For multiple causes and effects, i.e., an effect having more than one cause or a cause having more than one effect, we can use the diagram format in note-taking as follows.

Cause(s)	Effect(s)
① High unemployment ② High interest rates ③ High real estate costs	Decreased real estate sales
Tim oversleeps.	① Tim misses the train. ② He's late for work. ③ The 9:00 meeting is off.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Using Body Language

A great presentation is about much more than just content. Your physical movement also has a strong impact on the success of your speech. Body language is a means of non-verbal communication which conveys messages through body movements rather than words. It can make all the difference between a dull, static presentation and a dynamic, engaging one. Body language can be broken down into five categories:

1 Facial expressions

Approach your audience with an eyebrow flash, opening eyes slightly wider than usual. When you emote with the top of your face, raise your eyebrows and light up your eyes, people may find your presentation more engaging. The next part is to win with the right smile. A natural smile builds trust and confidence. Smiling authentically helps you connect better with your audience and build more confidence in your presentation.

2 Eye contact

Make eye contact with the audience about 99% of the time, which can help create a positive relationship with them and make them feel involved. Don't stare at one person the whole time, but look directly into somebody's eyes long enough to finish a thought and then move on to the next person. "One thought, one look." If speaking to a large group of people, you should make sure you share eye contact with all areas of the room.

3 Posture

Stand in a balanced and relaxed position, which conveys confidence. Stand with your feet about shoulder width apart. Then put just a tiny bit of weight on the front of your feet and a little bit lighter on your heels. And your whole feet are still touching, but you have a little bit more of a ready responsive position. You should also soften your knees a little bit. Do not shuffle your feet back and forth, sway your hips or cross and uncross your legs repetitively.

4 Gestures

Proper hand gestures can help clarify and reinforce your ideas. Here are some helpful hand gestures to keep your audience engaged.

Keep your palms up and open. This indicates that you are being open and honest. It will invite your audience in, and make them feel comfortable.

Use hand "steepling" instead of hand "wringing". Hand steepling can be used effectively during intermediate moments, such as when you are thinking or switching topics. Remember not to steeple your hands all the time, do it just enough to feel confident and to add emphasis to your points. On the other hand, "wringing the hands" comes across as fidgety and nervous behavior. Nevertheless, if you don't like steepling, just loosely clasp your hands.

Use "side-palm" to persuade your audience. Hold your hand out in handshake position. You are literally reaching out to your audience, and it will make them want to meet you half way. It will be much easier to persuade them. You can use two hands to double your emphasis.

Don't put your hands on your hips, or joined behind your back.

Palms Up&Open

Side-Palm

Hand Steepling

5 Position and movement

If you want to walk in a presentation, it's okay to walk a little bit but avoid pacing back and forth non-stop. Walk with a purpose, stop, share your message, and then maybe a minute or so later, walk again. Move forward to emphasize a point, move backward to change to a different topic.

All these tips above work together to make a difference. For example, at the beginning, you walk into the room, pause, look around the audience, raise your eyes and smile, and then you begin to deliver your content.

I. ▶ Watch a video on enhancing communication skills in an ever more digital world. Analyse how the speaker uses body language in his presentation according to the five categories of body language.

1 Facial expressions .....

2 Eye contact .....

3 Posture .....

4 Gestures .....

5 Position and movement .....

II. Do you want to be job-ready before graduation? Do you want to shine in the workplace and achieve happiness at work? Creating a successful career path starts the moment you step on campus. Give an informative speech on how to prepare for your future career while you are at university. Remember to use body language in your presentation.

You may take the following steps:

1 Discuss in groups and brainstorm ideas. Decide on the central ideas, find supporting details and work out a list of tips. Organize your ideas in an outline. The tips below may serve as your reference.

- Develop technical knowledge and skills: Foreign language proficiency; Computer/machine operation/software skills; Certificates/Degree
- Gain real-life experience in the world of work: Summer jobs/Internships/Volunteer work
- Hone soft skills: Communication/Interpersonal & networking/Critical thinking & problem-solving

2 Prepare an oral presentation and practice it. Each member takes turns to do the presentation based on the outline the group has worked out. While one member is presenting, the others observe carefully and help the speaker to use body language more effectively according to the five categories of body language learned above.

3 Each group will choose a representative to do a presentation in class. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on whether the speakers are effectively using body language. They can use the following table to evaluate the use of body language in the presentation.

Do you know "996" work schedule? Are you for it or against it? In this video, the CCTV hostess initiates a discussion on overtime culture in many companies and workplaces.

I. ▶ Watch the video and fill in the blanks.

"996" schedule refers to 1 _____ from 9:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. six days a week, which has not only become 2 _____ for many programmers in tech companies but also 3 _____ in many Chinese workplaces. China's official labour law limits weekly working time to 4 _____ hours and any overtime should be compensated. But given the 5 _____ landscape of the Chinese economy, many feel obliged to 6 _____.

II. ▶ In this video, the hostess introduces different perspectives on "996" work schedule and interviews two guest speakers to share their perspectives on the issue. Study the following skill on viewing an issue from multiple perspectives. Then watch the video again and fill in the blanks.

Critical Thinking Skill: Viewing an Issue from Multiple Perspectives

People view problems differently; they evaluate premises and conclusions differently and they have different ideas about what actions should be taken. An argument one person sees very strong may be viewed by another person as weak. Two people can use reason and logic to evaluate a premise or an argument and arrive at very different judgments. A significant part of the explanation for this has to do with perspectives.

1 What is a perspective?

A perspective is the way individuals see the world. It comes from their personal point of view and is shaped by life experiences, values, their current state of mind, the assumptions they bring into a situation, and a whole lot of other things.

Our perspectives impact the opinions we form about nonempirical issues that cannot be proven true or false. At the core of many social, political, economic, cultural and moral issues are disagreements about what values we want to promote and how best to promote them.

2 How do we view an issue from multiple perspectives?

We should recognize that there are many possible ways to interpret and process shared experiences and events and acknowledge alternative views to the ones we hold. In order to work together to solve broader problems, each of us needs to consider different perspectives and acknowledge the values in the perspectives. Seeing a problem from multiple perspectives and understanding how each impacts the conclusions others reach can lead to solutions that benefit the broadest group of people.

Should the "996" work schedule be encouraged? The following are several perspectives mentioned in the video.

Programmers and their families:

The strenuous work schedule is 1 _____ employees and creating an 2 _____ work-life balance.

A start-up founder & passionate worker:

There should not be a 3 _____ to how much you work if you 4 _____ what you do.

A hi-tech company employer:

Given the fierce competition, the mindset is mandatory for 5 _____ and a reflection of 6 _____.

Founder & CEO of Yuanwei:

Employers should not 7 _____ employees to do whatever they don't want to because it's not the most 8 _____ way to work with them.

Your point of view:

Putting into Practice: Project

"A satisfied worker is a productive worker". A satisfied workforce will create a pleasant atmosphere within the organization. Job satisfaction reflects employees' thoughts and feelings about their job and workplace. How happy do workers feel about their jobs nowadays?

Work in groups and conduct a survey on today's workers' job satisfaction.

You may take the following steps:

1 Choose a team leader (responsible for setting a common goal, allocating tasks, setting deadlines, coordinating and supervising that the tasks are completed on time).

2 Decide your target group (e.g. gender, age, industry) and the number of subjects you will survey (10–20 recommended).

3 Do research on theories or factors that are used to measure job satisfaction. The factors may include but are not limited to:

- Income
- Workload
- Opportunities to learn new skills
- Work-life balance
- Relationship with co-workers

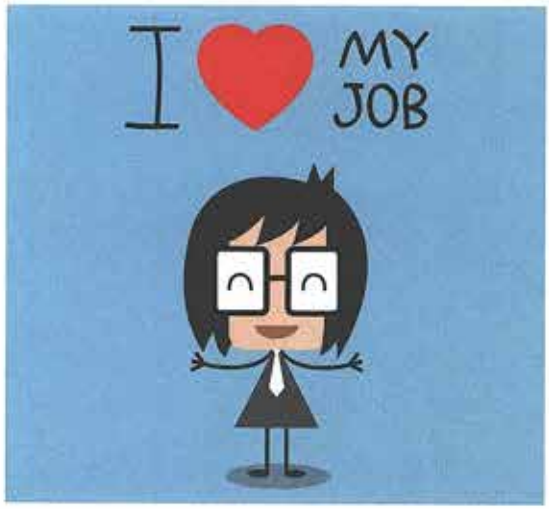

4 Decide on the survey method(s) (e.g. face-to-face interviews, paper-and-pencil questionnaire, electronic questionnaire)

5 Develop questions for the questionnaires.

6 Collect and analyse the findings and results.

- Organise your results in a readable form (e.g. bar chart, line graph, pie chart and table)
- Analyse the figures and findings and draw conclusions/make recommendations if necessary

7 Write a report on the survey and make an oral presentation with visual aids.

News: Glorified Gossip?

If you don't read the newspaper, you're uninformed; if you read the newspaper, you're misinformed.

Lead-in

I. How do you know what's happening around you and the world? Look at the following pictures. Do they ring a bell? Work in pairs and list as many ways of getting information as you can and rank them in order of efficiency.

Ways of getting information

II. Watch a video about how the way people get news has changed over time and fill in the blanks.

1 The amount of information _____ may be limitless, but the time and energy we have to _____ it is not.

2 Only a few decades ago, news was broad-based. Your choices were limited to … three or four TV networks where trusted newscasters _____ at the same reliable time every evening.

3 More recently, the Internet has _____ of information and viewpoints, with social media, blogs, and online video, turning every citizen into a potential reporter.

4 But if everyone is a reporter, nobody is, and _____ may disagree, not only on the opinions, but on the facts themselves.

III. Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: Noting Comparison and Contrast

Both comparison and contrast are ways of understanding one subject by putting it next to another. Some ideas in listening practice are presented in this form. Comparing involves discovering similarities, while contrasting is based on finding differences. Speakers often use two ways to organize a comparison/contrast. They are shown in the diagram below. If you can recognize these structures in listening practice, you will easily grasp the speaker's logic flow.

Subject-by-subject

Introduction	Subject 2 – Point 1
Subject 1 – Point 1	– Point 2
– Point 2	– Point 3
– Point 3	Conclusion
Transition

Point-by-point

Introduction	Point 3
Point 1	Subject 1 vs. Subject 2
Subject 1 vs. Subject 2	Conclusion
Point 2
Subject 1 vs. Subject 2

Besides, speakers often use discourse markers to indicate comparison and contrast. The following are some commonly used ones. If you are familiar with them, you will quickly sense the comparison and contrast in listening practice.

> Comparison: likewise, the same as, similarly, both…and…, neither…nor…
> Contrast: although, whereas, on the other hand, however, different (from), not the same as

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Using Visual Aids

Can you explain the key concepts you have learned from the previous three videos in this unit? Would the following visuals help you remember?

"A picture is worth a thousand words" is as true today as it has always been. Visual data is processed 60,000 times faster than textual data by your brain. Usually, people remember about 80% of what they see. Visuals are an important part of a presentation. They can help to keep your audience engaged, make your point, and remind you of what you want to say.

A visual aid is anything which your audience can see to help them follow your presentation. There are various types of visual aids that you can employ. And they are chosen for multiple purposes.

Type	Purpose
PowerPoint	Make something easier for the audience to understand e.g. clarify and show examples
White/black board	Emphasize what you are saying and make a point memorable
Videos	Engage the audience and maintain their interest
Handouts	Summarize information or reduce the amount of spoken words

Once you have decided to use visual aids in your presentation, you need to know that good use of visual aids can make a presentation, whereas poor use can ruin it. Here are some principles you need to follow.

General Rules:

- Don't rely solely on visual aids. They are to supplement your speech, not substitute for it.

- Make sure all visuals are relevant and not just decorative.
- Make sure the audience at the back can see all visuals clearly.
- Rehearse with your visual aids before presentation.
- Always have a backup plan in case technology doesn't work.

It is also important to use appropriate language to refer to your visual aids. Examples of language to refer to visual aids are given below.

Useful Phrases:

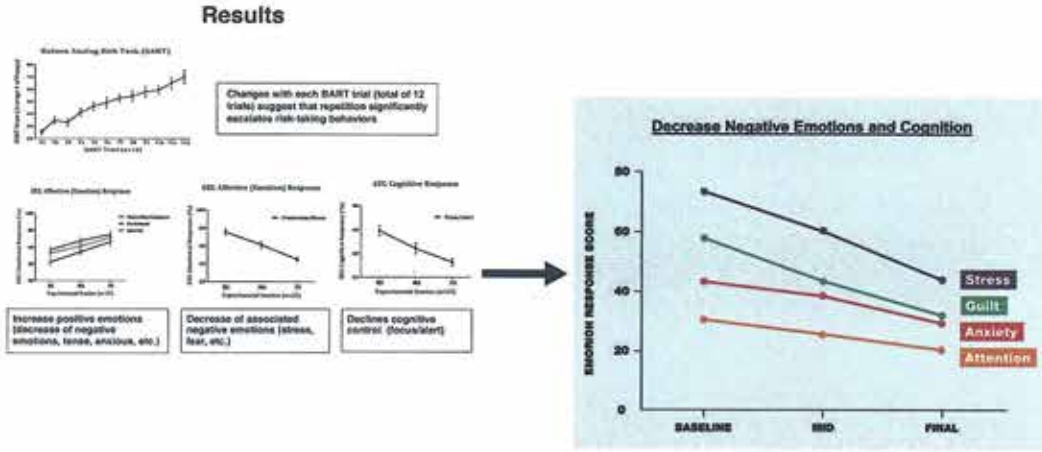

As you can see here …	Let me show you…
Here we can see…	Let's look at…
If we look at this slide…	On the right/left you can see…
If you look at the screen, you will see…	I am going to show you…
I'd like you to look at…	This table/diagram/chart/slide shows…

EXAMPLE

Let's take a look at PowerPoint. PowerPoint is a widely used visual aid thanks to the availability of projectors in most classrooms. It is a simple yet powerful tool for presentation because speakers can insert a range of visual items to hold the audience's attention. Let's analyse how to create effective slides through some examples. Analyse each pair of slides and see how they are improved.

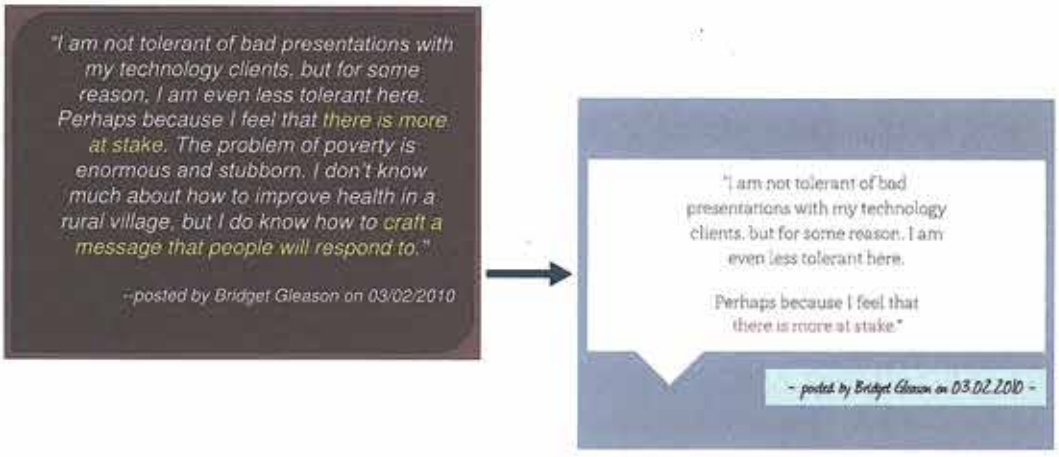

1. Make things visual

Don't use endless slides of bulleted lists that all look the same. Remember that slides are not a repository for notes. When you have heavy text on a slide, think about how you can convey the message visually. Try to use photos that are literal or symbolic, or use iconic line art.

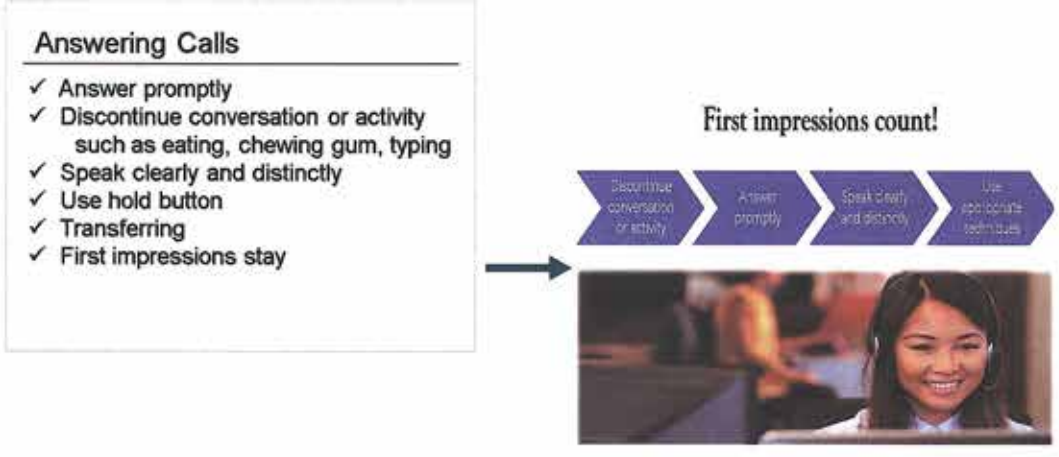

2. Less is more

When designing infographic, ask yourself these questions: What do I want my audience to take away from my charts, graphs or diagrams? Why is it important for them to know this? How does it fit into my overall presentation? Use colour, bolding or enlarging to highlight key numbers or data.

3. One idea per slide

Too much information on one slide would not only make it difficult to send a clear and impactful message to the audience, but also divert your audience's attention away from listening to you. If you have more to say, put it on the next slide.

I. Technology has dramatically changed the way people get information. The dawn of the Internet made news spread faster, enabling users to access information within seconds. But is this a good thing? Work in groups and present your ideas on the topic "How Has Technology Affected the Way People Receive News?"

Step 1 Preparation

Discuss in groups and develop an argument. Do some research and collect as much information (such as statistics, stories, examples, research findings) as you can to support your argument.

Step 2 Work on your visuals

Work in groups and decide what types of visual aids you will use for your presentation. Use what you have learned from the tips and examples above to prepare effective visuals. Use the following checklist to examine the quality of your visuals. Make improvement if necessary.

- Does each visual aid contain only the information that is needed to make our point?
- Are the visual aids large enough to be seen clearly by everyone in the room?
- Is there a clear contrast between the lettering and background of the visual aids?
- Are the charts, graphs or diagrams used correctly to show statistical trends and patterns?
- Are the videos carefully edited and incorporated into the speech?
- Have we carefully planned the content, order, and timing of the multimedia presentation so it will be smooth?
- Do we have a backup disk for the multimedia presentation?
- Are we prepared to give the presentation even if the multimedia equipment were to fail?

Step 3 Presentation

Each group will prepare an oral presentation about their stance on the topic. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on whether the presentations are effectively and skillfully supported by visual aids. After all presentations are finished, the whole class should vote for the presentation with the best visual aids.

Fake news is news or stories created to deliberately misinform or deceive readers. Lots of things you read online, especially in your social media feeds, may appear to be true, but they often are not. And it's getting increasingly difficult to tell whether stories are credible or not. In this video, journalist Damaso Reyes teaches us how to spot fake news.

I. ▶ Watch the video and number the tips on how to spot fake news in the order you hear them.

..... A. Look up the author of the article.

..... B. Read the content on the site to see whether the articles meet the quality standards.

..... C. Watch out for the quality of the sources that the article depends on.

..... D. Be aware of news that impedes your ability to think logically.

..... E. Use reverse image search to see whether an image is used in its original context.

II. ▶ Fake news often contains misleading arguments supported by problematic information. To debunk them is important in this information society. Study the following skill on how to make a case against an argument. Then watch the video again and finish the tasks.

Critical Thinking Skill: Making a Case Against an Argument

Critical thinking includes recognizing poor arguments even when they support our own point of view. In Unit 4, Book 2, we have learned how to recognize weaknesses in an argument through evaluating the evidence. We understand that inaccurate, insufficient or irrelevant evidence would undermine the validity of any argument. In this unit, let's continue to learn about how to challenge an argument by pointing out its flaws.

Generally speaking, arguments can be factually, morally or logically flawed. Almost every argument can be found wanting in at least one of these three respects. Here are a few examples:

Type of Flaw	Example
Factually flawed	There is no need for students to learn about the causes of gender inequality because it is a thing of the past.

The factual assumption in this example is that gender inequality is a thing of the past. When arguing against this argument, you could provide evidence to show that gender inequality continues to be a problem.

Morally flawed	Schools don't need to teach students about mental health because no one cares what students feel as long as they have good grades.

This claim is based on an assumed value that most people probably do not share. Namely, grades mean everything. To argue against it, you should point it out and state why a healthy society shouldn't share this value.

Logically flawed	Banning cigarette product placement in films will cause more young people to smoke because it will make smoking more mysterious.

This argument has a problematic analytical assumption. The response would be that this ban would stop movies from showing images which make smoking seem attractive and glamorous, therefore actually reduce the number of young people smoking.

You may use the following sentence patterns to introduce the flaws you've found in an argument.

While this claim is popular, it is not supported by the facts.

This view seems/looks/sounds persuasive at first, but ...

What this argument overlooks/fails to consider/does not take into account is ...

This claim suffers from a flaw in its reasoning/application.

1 Use the information from the video to fill in the blanks.

Indicators of Fake News

- Information comes from a site that tries to create a URL which is 1) _____ _____ that you might know and you might be familiar with.
- The news makes you really angry or really sad or it makes you 2) _____. That's actually 3) _____ to you because it's kind of 4) _____ _____ or your ability to think.
- The author of the article is unknown.
- The article uses unreliable sources. One of the ways in which 5) _____ is that a lot of people keep repeating the same information but 6) _____.
- When a claim uses pictures that are authentic but out of context.

2 Imagine you come across the following news online. What can you do to verify this news? Read an excerpt from this news. Do you find any weaknesses? If you do, how can you argue against them?

"Cocoa plants grow within a narrow strip of land where temperature, rain, and humidity all stay relatively constant throughout the year. Over half of the world's chocolate now comes from just two countries in West Africa — Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana. But those areas won't be suitable for chocolate in the next few decades. By 2050, rising temperatures will push today's chocolate-growing regions more than 1,000 feet uphill into mountainous terrain — much of which is currently preserved for wildlife, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration."

III. Work in groups and discuss the following questions.

Putting into Practice: Project

Certain groups of people, such as celebrities, senior citizens, female PhDs, people from certain regions and people with disabilities are portrayed differently in various media forms. What are their images in the media? Work in groups and find out how they are portrayed in the media.

You may take the following steps:

1 Decide on one group of people as the focus of your project work.

Who deserves our attention?	What's the main reason for choosing her/ him/them?

2 Surf the Internet and collect as much information as you can about the typical media image of your chosen group of people. Remember to include specific examples as supporting details.

3 Discuss in groups the following questions: Is the media image of your chosen group of people objective and true? If not, how can you argue against them with proper evidence?

What are the missing facts?

4 Prepare an oral report about your group discussion and research findings and then present it to the whole class. Make sure your presentation is supported by proper visual aids.

UNIT 8

To Be or Not To Be

Literature adds to reality. It does not simply describe it. It enriches the necessary competencies that daily life requires and provides; and in this respect, it irrigates the deserts that our lives have already become.

— C. S. Lewis
(1898–1963, British writer)

Lead-in

I. Can you name these classic works? How much do you know about them?

II. ▶ Watch the video and fill in the blanks.

To be, or not to be, that is the question:

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to 1 _____

The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,

Or to take arms against 2 _____

And by opposing end them. To die — to sleep,

No more; and by a sleep to say we end

The 3 _____ and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to: 'tis a consummation

Devoutly to be wished. To die, to sleep;

To sleep, perchance to dream — ay, there's the rub:

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,

When we have shuffled off this 4 _____ coil,

Must give us pause.

III. Work in pairs and discuss the questions.

1 How do you understand "There are a thousand Hamlets in a thousand people's eyes"?

2 How important is literature in your life? How often do you read literature?

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: Using Symbols and Abbreviations

During lectures, it is hard to listen and take notes at the same time. When you stop to write down one idea, you might miss another idea which is equally important. Therefore, you need to find a way to write down the ideas as quickly as possible, so that you can maximise the amount of time you spend listening. This is where symbols and abbreviations can help. Symbols can help you take notes quickly. The following table presents symbols often used in note-taking.

Common Symbols in Note Taking

Symbol	Words/Phrases Used in Lectures	Symbol	Words/Phrases Used in Lectures
≠	not equal to, is not, are not, is the opposite of	?	uncertain, possibly, unproven, question
=	is (was), are (were), is equal to, is the same as	×	no, not, incorrect
>	is greater/more than	→	lead to, cause (showing result)
<	is less than	←	caused by, because of (showing reason)
∴	to conclude, therefore	↑	increase, more, go up
∵	because	↓	decrease, less, go down

Beside symbols, abbreviations can also help you take notes quickly. Almost any word can be abbreviated during note-taking. Below are some ideas about how to do this.

- Use the beginnings of words. For example, pol — politics; gov — government; subj — subject; info — information; Inc. — Incorporated; intro — introduction...
- Use the beginnings of words with the final letter. For example, wk — week; dept — department; govt — government; interl — international...
- Abbreviate specific words from the lecture. For example, AR — acid rain; S — sulphur; N — nitrogen; S — Shakespeare; G B S — George Bernard Shaw...

Since you are the person who is going to read and use the notes, it would be very helpful to develop your own personalized symbols or abbreviations.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Delivering a Presentation

Presentation delivery is an art, not a science. In the process of delivery, audiences respond positively to speakers who balance an appropriate degree of formality with a conversational tone. And strong delivery usually contains certain elements.

Elements of strong delivery

- Deliver your message using an audible voice with effective variations in pitch, rate, volume, pace, and inflection.
- Use clear, concise, accurate, appropriate and vivid language. Don't rush your sentences or let the ends of your sentences drop in volume.
- Establish eye contact with your entire audience; make sure your eyes convey confidence and sincerity.
- Use natural and spontaneous gestures to reinforce your ideas.
- Present a professional appearance, including dress and grooming.
- Use proper visual aids.
- Keep in mind the time limit.
- Thank your audience when you have concluded and before you leave the stage.

Have a backup plan

If you have supplementary materials such as visual aids, like PowerPoint slides, have a backup plan in place in case some piece of equipment doesn't work. You may prepare some printouts for that possibility.

EXAMPLE

Joseph is a literature professor. In his speech, he tries to change the way people feel about literature. The aim of the speech is to show that literature is not just a collection of classics, something you are supposed to read or have to study in school. Rather, Joseph proposes that literature can and should be a part of people's everyday life. By sharing his personal experience, he proves that when people are facing extraordinary difficulties and challenges, literature can save their life. Let's see how the elements of strong delivery are incorporated into his speech.

Deliver your message using an audible voice with effective variations in pitch, rate, volume, pace, and inflection: Joseph's voice was clearly heard. And when he shared with the audience his interesting childhood experience, his voice was high and he spoke fast. However, when he talked about his tragic experience of losing his wife, his voice was low and he spoke slowly.

Use clear, concise, accurate, appropriate and vivid language: His language is easy to understand and he used the fewest words to express the most meaning. For example, when he talked about his family background, he said that his family was smart and hardworking Italian immigrant. The audience could get the information immediately.

Establish eye contact with your entire audience; make sure your eyes convey confidence and sincerity: During the speech, he kept eye contact with the audience, which showed his confidence and sincerity, helped him build rapport with the audience and kept the audience engaged in the speech. He looked at the audience almost all the time.

Use natural and spontaneous gestures to reinforce your ideas: Most of the time, Joseph used open palm gesture to build trust between the audience and him. Also, his gesture was very natural. It came spontaneously with his speech. For example, he used fist to emphasize the theme of exile in Dante's Divine Comedy. And when he was happy, his gesture was out stretched. When he talked about the traffic accident of his wife, his gesture was closed, with hands clenched.

Present a professional appearance, including dress and grooming: He was nicely dressed with formal suits and his grooming was very decent, with clean face and neatly trimmed hair.

Use proper visual aids: He used PowerPoint slides when necessary without heavily depending on them. The slides were just aids. He didn't read them.

Keep in mind the time limit: To respect the time limit is said to be the first rule of a successful public speaking. Joseph finished his speech within the time limit.

Thank your audience when you have concluded and before you leave the stage: At the end of the speech, the speaker thanked his audience to show his appreciation of their patience and listening. It also indicated that the speech was over.

I. In 2012, Mo Yan was awarded Nobel Prize in Literature. It is the first time for a writer of Chinese nationality to win the prize. How much do you know about Mo Yan? Why could he win the prize? Work in groups and deliver a presentation on the life story of Mo Yan and the reasons why Mo Yan was awarded the prize.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1

Go through your speech manuscript and check whether the speech contains sufficient information, whether the main points are clear and whether the conclusion echos the introduction. Revise the speech when needed.

Step 2

Practice delivering your presentation with visual aids. Check whether your voice is audible, and whether there are effective variations in pitch, rate, volume, pace, and inflection. In the process, make sure your use of visual aids is proper. Also, don't forget to time your speech to make sure that it could be finished within the time limit.

Step 3

Practice eye contact and gestures with your visual aids. Imagine there is a large audience sitting in front of you. While you speak one sentence, let your eye fall on one imaginary audience. Then when you speak another sentence, let your eye fall on another imaginary audience. Practice in the same manner until you finish your speech. At the same time, mind your gestures. Are they natural? Do they come spontaneously with your speech?

Step 4

Practice the presentation in front of a mirror to check for eye contact and distracting mannerisms. Most importantly, try it out on roommates for their feedback. Finally, give your presentation a dress rehearsal in the classroom where you are going to give the presentation next week. And also print out your PowerPoint slides in case the equipment doesn't work.

Literature is not just an end product, like a story, a novel, or a poem. It's a process, a way of expressing human experiences. In this video, Professor Wheeler explains what literature is and how important it is to have a grasp of literature.

I. ▶ Watch the video and fill in the blanks.

1 I think a lot of people think of literature as an _____, a story, a novel, a poem. But in reading literature, we need to think of literature more as a _____. It's a way that writers express the _____. You could even describe literature as a specific kind of language.

2 But the _____ is to give someone else the experience that they have received and they do that through the written word or sometimes the performed word.

3 It's one of the few real means. First of all, we have to travel through time. Literature is _____. Now archaeology can give us elements of a _____, but literature is more of an energy, showing us what people hundreds or thousands of years ago believed and behaved and what they experienced. In literature, this gives us a chance to _____ and to _____ the human experience.

4 To broaden one's experience is to have a _____ of an action outside of your normal course of events.

5 It can take those experiences that we have and give us a different _____, different facets to think about them.

II. In this video, Professor Wheeler uses examples to share some inspiring ideas about the definition and functions of literature. Study the following skill on how to interpret the given information through examples. Then watch the video again and give examples to prove the importance of literature.

Critical Thinking Skill: Interpreting the Given Information Through Examples

Well-chosen examples can back up and add value to your statements. They can also make your statements clearer, give people more information, and decrease the chances that the fact or idea is wrongly applied to real-life situations. Moreover, with the inclusion of examples, people will have more trust as there is proper proof to back up the claims, and they will be able to grasp the concept in a much quicker and better way. Making a statement without using examples can make your point fuzzy, thus creating difficulty in understanding.

Here is how to interpret the given information through examples.

1 Master the speaker's point and form your own point

Based on the given information, summarize the speaker's point and form your own point. Feel strongly about your own point. This will help you activate your previous knowledge and search for your personal experiences to prove your point.

2 Support your point with examples

Once you have a point which you feel strongly about, ask yourself the question: What experience do I have to help me think that way? What books have I read about that point? Who else also holds that point? What famous lines could I quote to support that point? Then formulate your examples.

3 Explain your examples

Listing examples without explaining proves nothing. So, do not just list them. Explain why. Your examples must be relevant to the point and clearly explained.

Give an example to explain the following view held by Professor Wheeler: "... literature can also deepen our experience. It can take those experiences that we have and give us a different vantage point, different facets to think about them."

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

1 What are the Chinese literary works that have broadened and deepened your life experience?

2 Do you agree that literature is real time travel? Use examples to prove your point.

3 In this digital era, paper book reading, to a certain extent, has been replaced by digital reading. Which type of reading do you prefer, paper reading or digital reading? Why?
