总 序

五年前，为配合各高校全面贯彻执行《大学英语教学指南》中提高大学生英语能力、培养国际化人才的要求，我们参照《国家中长期教育改革与发展规划纲要(2010–2020年)》以及《教育部关于全面提高高等教育质量的若干意见》的精神，在上海外语教育出版社的帮助下，组织全国十多所高校设计、编写了这套“新目标大学英语系列教材”。

本系列教材充分反映了当今外语教学理论，并基于对中国大学英语现状与发展趋势的充分调研，受到了广大师生的喜爱。为了更好体现《大学英语教学指南》(2020版)和《中国英语能力等级量表》的要求，我们对教材进行了修订，使其更符合新的大学英语教学需求。

一、教材特色

“新目标大学英语系列教材”之“新目标”包含三层含义：1. 全球化和高等教育国际化发展趋势以及中国新的国家发展战略对中国大学生英语能力提出的新目标和新要求；2.《大学英语教学指南》(2020版)对大学英语提出的新的多元化课程目标；3. 各个大学根据学校办学定位、特色、人才培养规格对学生英语能力设定的新目标和新要求。

教材设计体现以下特色：

1. 以学生为本

各教程注重语言知识的讲解与传授，以及语言技能、学习技能和思维能力的培养，通过任务、活动及练习的设置引导学生在“做”中“学”，在真实的语言交际环境中提高学习技能和语言技能。教材主题的选择对接学生的年龄特点和时代特点，符合学生认知和情感能力发展的需求，可帮助学生拓宽国际视野及提升综合素养。练习类型包括主题拓展、语言知识、思维训练、自主学习能力培养等方面。

2. 多维度多层次的立体体系

教材继承传统的“《综合教程》+其他”教材体系，根据新时期大学英语教学的特点以及英语学习的最佳路径，构建全新的“《综合教程》+《视听说教程》+《阅读教程》+‘主题英语教程’”教材体系，不仅全面培养学生的英语听、说、读、写能力，而且注重提高大学生科学人文素养和跨文化交际能力，并培养他们以英语为媒介从事专业学习和国际学术交流的能力。

二、教材结构

本系列教材的结构体系按照《大学英语教学指南》(2020版)提出的“通用英语”

“专门用途英语”和“跨文化交际”三大板块进行设计、编写。

通用英语

通用英语教材旨在全面提高学生的英语语言技能，为后续课程（特别是专门用途英语课程或全英语专业课程）的学习打下基础。

《综合教程》：1—4册(刘正光主编)

《综合教程》通过帮助学生阅读符合其认知和情感特点的优秀范文，掌握基本阅读技能和语言基础知识，逐步形成系统的组织和表达思想的能力，同时利用阅读材料所提供的英语语言素材和相关主题知识，培养学生综合使用语言的能力。

《视听说教程》：1—4册(徐锦芬主编)

《视听说教程》涵盖丰富的视听练习和口头语言交际活动，话题和难度从通用英语过渡到学术英语，注重让学生通过自主学习、合作学习和项目式学习提高听说能力，培养批判性思维，获得听懂专业课程、参与学术交流的能力。

《阅读教程》：1—4册(束定芳主编)

《阅读教程》的主题完全对应《综合教程》的主题，教材内容不仅增加了相同主题选文的体裁和数量，更重要的是帮助学生进一步巩固和拓展相关主题知识和语言技能，熟练掌握阅读技巧，提升阅读速度。

专门用途英语

《科技英语教程》(王腊宝主编)；《人文社科英语教程》(文旭主编)

这两本教材是专门为理工科和人文社科专业方向学生进入全英语专业课学习或阅读专业文献而编写的过渡性教材，也可作为不同专业学生的拓展阅读教程。

跨文化交际

《中国文化英语教程》(束定芳主编)；《西方文化英语教程》(殷企平主编)

这两本教材的设计充分考虑到中国学生对中国传统文化和西方文化的兴趣，能满足学生深入了解中国传统文化和西方文化的需求。

三、教材修订情况

近五年来，高等教育乃至整个教育领域都发生了较大的变化。

2018年9月，教育部会同国家有关部委集中出台了“六卓越一拔尖”2.0计划。几乎所有的文件都针对“国际交流和国际化人才培养”提出了具体的要求。2020年，《大学英

语教学指南》（2020版）正式颁布并出版。新《指南》在课程思政、教学要求、教学内容、教学方法与手段、教师发展等方面都做了相关的修订和补充。

为了使大学英语教学更好地服务高等学校“双一流”建设和国际化人才培养，我们组织了“新目标大学英语系列教材”的修订工作。

本次修订工作主要集中在《综合教程》和《视听说教程》，其他教程在吸收读者反馈的基础上，也将陆续修订。

本次修订的主要内容和原则如下：第一，替换部分课文，适当增加中国文化内容的比重，补充围绕中国文化主题的练习；第二，增加培养学生逻辑思维、创新思维和批判性思维的练习和活动；第三，对部分练习的内容和形式进行调整，拓展课程思政元素的内涵，帮助学生提高讲好中国故事的能力；第四，根据部分学校师生的建议，降低原先部分语料的难度，增加更符合学生实际水平和专业学习的语言输入。

希望此次修订能更好地帮助学生提升核心素养，培养跨文化意识和跨文化交际能力，在提升英语能力的同时，学习中外文化知识和相关专业知识。

四、教材使用建议

本系列教材可充分满足《大学英语教学指南》（2020版）提出的通用英语课程中基础级和提高级的教学要求，各高校可根据本校学生的实际情况和教学目标选择使用。

本系列教材中的《综合教程》《视听说教程》《阅读教程》可作为主干教材用于基础阶段和提高阶段的教学；《科技英语教程》《人文社科英语教程》《中国文化英语教程》和《西方文化英语教程》可作为提高阶段教材，或作为学生自主学习的拓展资源。

新生英语基础相对较好的高校可加快各基础阶段的教学进度，并补充与主题相关、有助于英语学习的内容；对于新生英语基础相对比较薄弱的高校，建议使用基础阶段教材帮助学生打好语言基本功，再视学生语言能力情况开设拓展课程。

本系列教材在策划和编写过程中得到原上海外语教育出版社社长兼总编辑庄智象教授的全方位支持和专业指导，此外还得到其他多方面的支持，特别是教育部大学外语教学指导委员会、外语界许多知名专家学者、高校一线教师和上海外语教育出版社高等教育事业部的编辑等，在此一并表示衷心的感谢！

由于编者水平所限，编写时间仓促，教材中难免有疏漏与不足，欢迎专家、广大教师和学生批评指正。

Preface

The New Target College English series is the most comprehensive English language textbook series that I have seen. The whole series is based on the new college English curriculum guidelines set by the Ministry of Education, which emphasizes both training in basic skills and the development of cross-cultural awareness and some ESP skills. The contents of the textbooks are ideal for achieving these goals.

There is a primary focus on reading and writing in the Integrated Course but the reading texts also serve as a basis for creative thinking and developing speaking skills. The topics of each unit have been very carefully chosen to reflect the global role that English now plays. I was especially pleased to see that the reading passages were extensive rather than the fashionable short texts that figure in many contemporary textbooks. There is — very rightly — a major emphasis on developing students' vocabulary, including both words and phrases.

The New Target College English series also focuses on academic listening and speaking with the specially designed Video Course. Readings in Western Culture and Readings in Chinese Culture provide extensive reading materials in both Chinese and Western cultures while Readings in Science and Technology and Readings in the Humanities and Social Sciences are designed as ESP materials to enhance students' academic skills in English. This series will appeal to a wide range of teachers with its blend of traditional type and communicative activities.

A key feature of the series is that it aims to cater to the different needs of Chinese students at different levels and locations. There is a rich array of learning activities in each course that will allow teachers the opportunities to select those activities that they consider best suited to their own students. Teachers can also select to use one, two or all of the courses in the complete series based on their students' English proficiency and the aims and objectives of the English curriculum in their own college. My hope, however, is that they will take advantage of the whole series.

The textbook series also takes account of the fact that many Chinese college students will need to use English to further their own academic studies. Thus there are activities specifically directed at the English language skills and strategies that students will need to study through the medium of English.

My lifelong work in second language acquisition points to one key principle that needs to inform the design of language courses — namely, the importance of providing as much input in the second language as possible. Language learning is a slow and gradual process that can only be successful if learners are exposed to massive amounts of input. Most language courses consist only of the main textbooks, which by themselves can never ensure the quantity of input needed to achieve high levels of proficiency. The New Target College English series is a very welcome exception.

I am very happy to endorse the New Target College English series.

编者的话

《视听说教程》根据教育部制定的《大学英语教学指南》编写，结合教育部印发的《高等学校课程思政建设指导纲要》进行修订，旨在培养和提高学生的通用英语交际技能和学术英语听说能力，同时将价值塑造、知识传授和能力培养三者融为一体，使学生在今后学习、工作和社会交往中不仅能用英语进行有效交流，而且能坚定理想信念，树立正确的世界观、人生观和价值观。

一、编写理念及特色

教程在内容上主题广泛、视角多元、选材典型，通过挖掘丰富的视听资源帮助学生丰富学识，增长见识，塑造品格。教程在编写上融合了“多元智力理论”、“互动教学法”、“任务型教学法”等多种理念，并注重让学生通过自主学习、合作学习和项目式学习提高听说能力，培养批判性思维，深刻理解素材内涵。

本教程体现以下特色：

1. 主题广泛有趣，融入思政内容

围绕“了解自我”、“了解环境”、“了解人际关系”、“了解科学与文化”四大主题编写，每册各有侧重，单元话题涵盖政治认同、家国情怀、文化修养、法治意识、道德修养等内容。学习内容的难度逐步进阶，从通用英语过渡到学术英语，符合学生的学习需求及认知规律。各单元的主题生动有趣，契合大学生的学习心理，能激发他们的探究欲望。此外，教程的每个单元均包含与中国相关的音视频素材，以增强学生的文化自信，鼓励他们讲好中国故事。

2. 传统与创新相结合的视听练习

除传统视听练习外，还专门设计了练习以帮助学生习得听力素材中一些重要语言形式，包含noticing activities和restructuring activities。前者引导学生关注听力素材中的语言本身，后者是前者的进一步拓展和延伸，训练学生灵活运用所学语言的能力。此外，本教程还融入了大学英语四六级改革后的新听力题型，助力学生进一步提升对话、短文、新闻和学术讲座的听力能力，结合大学英语课程特色，培养国际化人才。

3. 真实语境的任务型口语练习

口语技能的训练层层递进，从第一册到第四册分别训练conversational skill，discussion skill，presentation skill和academic presentation skill。口语练习的设计注重语用和情境，通过围绕主题的各类任务来引导和帮助学生在真实语境中运用英语进行交流，听与说有机结合，相互呼应，并结合学生实际特点和需求，在口语练习中提供相应的表达和句式为学生提供脚手架。

4. 形式多样的项目学习

项目学习是本教程的另一大特色，其基本理念是创造一个理想的环境，使学生在真实的语境中把本单元所学知识和技能应用于实际任务，这样不仅使学生内化语言知识，巩固学习技能，还将有效培养他们探索、思考、解决问题的能力以及与人协作的能力。在项目任务的设计中注重引导学生发现自我、理解文化、探究世界，形成正确的价值体系。

二、教程结构和单元结构

本教程共四册，每册分八个单元，每单元围绕一个主题提供六段视听材料，视听材料包括校园环境、日常生活、工作场景等，形式丰富多彩，有新闻、独白、电影片段、演讲片段、访谈节目、纪录片等。并以此为基础设计听说活动。

单元结构如下:

1. Famous Quotation

与主题相关的名人名言，以激发学生对本单元主题的兴趣和思考。

2. Lead-in

轻松的视听材料或图片资料，用以引入本单元话题。

3. Listening as Comprehension

结合两则视听素材开展视听练习，侧重对听力材料的理解和听力技巧、笔记技巧等的训练。素材内容体现课程的知识性和人文性。

4. Listening as Acquisition

在理解材料的基础上帮助学生注意和掌握材料中的语音特点、语言形式和语法结构。

5. Speaking for Communication

结合单元主题，创造真实语境开展口语活动，通过输出培养学生的英语应用能力。

6. Further Exploration

包含一则视频素材和三则音频素材。视频素材的选取注重蕴含育人功能，通过对视频内容的逻辑思维分析，有针对性地培养学生的批判性思维能力，在此基础上引导学生基于视频内容进行世界观、人生观和价值观方面的深入思考，发挥课程育人的作用。三则音频素材与大学英语四六级听力题型相对应，篇幅与难度循序渐进，听力内容紧密围绕单元主题，有针对性地提升学生的各项听力技能。

7. Putting into Practice: Project

让学生以小组形式独立完成一个Project，引导学生复习巩固所学语言知识、语言技能和语言策略，并以过程为导向提供大量学习机会帮助学生运用所学知识，从而发展综合能力。项目内容引导学生从了解自我、适应大学环境到理解文化、适应社会、探究世界，寓价值观引导于知识传授和能力培养之中。

8. Goal Checking

学生个人反思本单元所学，与教师（或同伴）交流，教师（或同伴）提供相关指导和帮助。

三、教程使用建议

各高校可根据各自的课堂学时数、具体教学目标以及学生的实际情况有选择地使用视听部分的内容。

对于视听说学时数比较少的学校，课堂上可重点进行Listening as Comprehension和Listening as Acquisition的技能操练，引导学生理解各种技能并运用技能理解听力素材，然后进一步习得与主题相关的语言形式，Speaking for Communication板块的口语活动可以安排学生在课外合作完成。Further Exploration板块的视频内容建议在课堂上完成，其余则由学生课外完成。

对于视听说课学时数比较充裕的学校，除Project之外，所有板块内容都可以在课堂上完成。建议学生在一周内完成与本单元主题相关的Project，并在下次课堂上参与汇报和评价，通过这些活动让学生学会自主学习和协作学习。

本教程在编写过程中，经过多次研讨、多方听取意见，反复修改完善。庄智象教授、本系列教材总主编上海外国语大学束定芳教授从宏观策划到具体细节都提出了许多宝贵的意见。编写团队成员都为大学英语一线教师。另外，本教程在编写过程中得到了上海外语教育出版社领导和华中科技大学外语学院领导的大力支持，谨在此一并感谢。

由于编者水平有限，教材中难免还存在不少问题与不足，欢迎业内同仁批评指正。

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: Outline

In Unit 1, Book 3, we have learned to take notes using the outlining method. It is one of the most common and popular methods of note-taking. In this unit, let's reinforce this listening skill.

Outlining is a way to visually represent the relationships between ideas. You can use headings and subheadings to separate ideas and use indentations to show the difference between main ideas and supporting ideas/examples. You can also mark your notes with numbers and letters. Usually Roman numerals (I, II, III, …) will be used as the most important, followed by capital letters (A, B, C, …), Arabic numbers (1, 2, 3, …), and lower-case letters (a, b, c, …).

Remember, numbers and letters used in one outline must be consistent. If a point has an A, it must have a B as well. If you think a point needs a subheading, only to find there is only one subheading, then that information is probably part of the main point, not a subheading underneath it.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Building Up Credibility

Imagine two speakers are talking about how to improve presentation skills. Compare the following excerpts of their talks. Whose talk are you more likely to follow? Why?

Speaker 1	Speaker 2
Presentation skills and public speaking skills are very useful in many aspects of work and life. However, to stand up in front of an audience and speak well are no easy job. As someone who gives talks and hosts workshops for a living, I spend a lot of time regularly developing, rehearsing, and delivering presentations to audiences. So today I would like to share with you a few dos and don'ts about giving good presentations.	Today's topic is about presentation skills. I hope I won't bore you with my talk. Let's get started.

The goal of presenting is usually to inform or persuade the audience. To achieve this, you need to build up credibility. It means building trust and believability in the audience's mind. The following are strategies that can be implemented to establish credibility.

1. Importance. Tell your audience why your talk matters to them. The earlier you make that apparent, the sooner listeners will see you as someone who's speaking for their benefit. That realization brings instant credibility.
2. Empathy. You can mention your special experience related to the speech topic and establish a special connection with your audience.
3. Expertise. Let the audience know your expertise on the subject you are going to elaborate on in your introduction because that helps you demonstrate your credibility. Your message will be seen as a recommendation made by an expert.
4. Preview. Explain the structure of your presentation before diving into the content. Provide a road map of what you plan to cover so people know what to expect and where you go every step of the way.
5. Confidence. Start your presentation saying how bad it's going to be won't help you at all. You don't need to make excuses and downplay expectations to protect your self-esteem. You must believe in the quality of your talk so your audience can too. One way to increase confidence is to practice delivery. It's suggested you keep practicing the speech until you are comfortable and don't feel the pressure of memorizing the content. Delivering it in a confident manner enhances your credibility.

I. Read the following four excerpts. Analyse how the speakers build up their credibility by referring to the strategies introduced above.

Excerpts	Strategies Adopted to Establish Credibility
I have stage fright. I've always had stage fright, and not just a little bit, it's a big bit. When I was 27, I started writing songs. I only played for myself because just knowing my roommates were in the same house made me feel uncomfortable. But the more I wrote, the more I practised, the more I wanted to perform. And I finally found a way to overcome this irrational fear. Today, I wish to share my solution with you. (Adapted from "How I beat stage fright" by Joe Kowan)
The human voice: It's the instrument we all play. It's the most powerful sound in the world, probably. It's the only one that can start a war or say "I love you." And yet many people have the experience that when they speak, people don't listen to them. And why is that? How can we speak powerfully to make changes in the world? (Adapted from "How to speak so that people want to listen" by Julian Treasure)
I study the future of crime and terrorism, and I'm afraid by what I see. You see, I've spent a career in law enforcement. I've been a street police officer, an undercover investigator, a counter-terrorism strategist, and I've worked in more than 70 countries around the world. I've had to see violence and the darker side of society. My work with criminals and terrorists has been highly educational. They have taught me a lot, and I'd like to be able to share some of these observations with you. (Adapted from "A vision of crimes in the future" by Marc Goodman)
I used to think the whole purpose of life was pursuing happiness. Everyone said the path to happiness was success, so I searched for that ideal job, that perfect boyfriend, that beautiful apartment. But instead of ever feeling fulfilled, I felt anxious. And I wasn't alone; my friends — they struggled with this, too. Eventually, I decided to go to graduate school for positive psychology to learn what truly makes people happy. What I discovered there changed my life. Today, I'd like to focus on two aspects: Is there more to life than being happy? And what's the difference between being happy and having meaning in life? (Adapted from "There's more to life than being happy" by Emily Smith)

II. College students have a lot to deal with: balancing study and social life, searching for summer internships, and managing stress. "Happiness" tends to be overlooked. But being happy should still be a major priority in college. Work in groups and present your ideas on the topic "How to Live a Happy Campus Life".

Step 1 Preparation

Discuss in groups and develop your thoughts on the topic. Research and collect as much information as you can. The advice below may serve as your reference.

- Take classes that reflect and further your interests.
- Go to your professors' office hours.
- Learn how to take notes.
- Get a planner and actually use it.
- Know your weaknesses and actively work on them.
- Find a group of friends who support you.
- Know that failure is not the end.
- Know when to reach out for help.
- Keep in touch with family.
- Take care of yourself.
- Keep your room clean.
- Exercise.
- Keep a healthy diet.
- Sleep well.

Step 2 Building up credibility

Work in groups and decide how to build trust and believability in your audience's mind. Use what you have learned from the tips and examples above to prepare your presentation. Make improvement if necessary.

Step 3 Presentation

Each group will prepare an oral presentation about their ideas on the topic. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on how the presenters build up their credibility. After all presentations are finished, the whole class should vote for the presentation that sounds the most persuasive.

On a personal level, happiness means different things. On a national level, what does happiness mean? Is there a way to measure the collective happiness and well-being of a population? What are the secrets of creating a happy society? Let's watch a video and find out.

1 ..... A. Having hope for the future is important for people to be happy.
2 ..... B. A prosperous economy is necessary for a country.

II. ▶ In this video, the speaker explains the concept of Gross National Happiness (GNH). Review the following skill on how to define key terms in a talk. Then watch the video again and finish the following tasks.

Critical Thinking Skill: Defining Key Terms

It's the speakers' responsibility to define key terms in their talks. By doing so, they show that they know what they are talking about and avoid misunderstandings of the key terms. In Unit 1, Book 3, we have learned how to figure out and define key terms from lectures. We have learned that we need to know precisely what key terms the lecturers are talking about and then reconstruct the definitions. In this unit, let's further our understanding of this skill.

What needs to be defined?	How to define it?
1. Terminology When speakers introduce technical terms used in a particular field, subject, science, or art, they should define them.	Give dictionary definition; Offer several alternative definitions and then indicate your own preferred one; Provide several extended examples; Explain how the term or concept works; Contrast new concept with a concept that's familiar to the audience.
2. Value terms Terms that often represent quite broad or controversial concepts also need to be defined. If you need to say "It depends on what you mean by love." Then you need to specify the meaning of love in your talk.

It is also important to use appropriate language to explain concepts. Examples of language to indicate a definition are given below.

Useful Sentence Patterns
X is/means …	X is like …
X, meaning …	It's called X because …
X refers to …	X is the name for …
X can be defined as …	X stands for …
The primary idea of X is …	X, also known as …, is …
What is X? … define(s) X as …	X is a term that describes this situation when …

It turns out that people with a lot of money 4 _____ than middle-class folks. Many of us assume that, if only I could 5 _____, then I'd be happy. Well, most people are not happier when they're 9 _____ than when they're doing other things.

A second area involves 12 _____. A third involves savouring. That means really 13 _____, not always rushing forward. Related to that is the idea of engagement. The final big area involves living life in a way which is meaningful. 14 _____ seems to be very important for 15 _____.

Putting into Practice: Project

One longstanding debate about happiness is whether money can buy happiness or not. Psychologists and economists have been examining the links between income and happiness for decades. Work in groups and debate on the relationship between what we earn and how we feel.

You may take the following steps:

1 Decide your side. Join the "Money can buy happiness" or "Money can't buy happiness" team.

2 Conduct research and collect as much information as you can to support your team's position. Meet with your team members to decide which arguments and supporting details your team can use, and what additional information is still needed.

Arguments	Supporting details

3 Make predictions as to the arguments your opponents will bring up. Work out tactics to argue against them.

Opposing arguments

4 Each team sends 4–6 representatives to participate in the debate. The rest will be the audience.

5 Debate. The two teams' task is to persuade the audience to vote for their point of view. The two sides take turns to make points intended to sway the audience.

6 Vote. Once the debate is over, the audience will vote and the team with more votes wins! Voters should base their choice on a combination of the following factors:

- Did the team define key terms clearly?
- Did the team make persuasive arguments? Did they provide sound evidence?
- Was the team respectful? Did they follow the procedure correctly?
- Did the team look confident? How about their eye contact and posture?
- Did the team use the words and phrases they've learned in this unit?

Note-Taking Skill: Word Map

In Unit 2, Book 3, we have learned to take notes by using word maps. In this unit, let's reinforce this skill. Please review the concept as follows.

A word map consists of connected circles with key information in them. These circles connect ideas with lines drawn from one circle to another. The large central circle contains the main topic. The outer connected circles contain related subtopics and supporting details. The information usually starts from the center and moves outward as the information becomes more detailed.

To show more clearly the relationships, hierarchies and connections between individual pieces of information, you can use different colors or shapes to make your map more unique and memorable.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Interacting with Your Audience

In a presentation, a speaker should aim for interaction that gets the audience closer to embrace his/her ideas. So try to keep the audience engaged and show them that you value them and want to connect with them. The following are six techniques you can adopt to interact with your audience to foster engagement and participation.

1. Ask more questions

You can ask rhetorical questions that you don't need anybody to answer. Just ask the question and make them think about it during your pause.

You can also actually ask them to respond. But make sure you ask them nice easy questions. All they have to do is maybe raise their hands or shout out a one-or-two-word response. For example, "Have you ever …? Raise your hand if you've ever …"

2. Ask the audience to do something physical

Ask your listeners to do some actions which will help them better understand your point of view. For instance, in his speech Creativity as a Life Skill, to make the point that people prefer to conform because trying new things makes them feel uncomfortable, Gerard Puccio asked everybody to cross their arms, and then asked them to switch their arms the opposite way that they're used to folding them. Having the audience do something physical helps drive home the point as well as gets them more engaged.

You can also ask people to repeat key facts and concepts out loud. This increases the chances they remember them.

3. Invite a volunteer

Ask a volunteer from your audience to come up to the front and do or demonstrate something with you. This will make the other listeners put themselves in the volunteer's place. And so they're much more likely to relate to it and they'll find it much more engaging and entertaining.

4. Use a polling tool

Polls cause people to think critically about what they hear and urge them to share their own opinions and expertise. Aside from the typical hand-raising poll, technology can help here. Put a question on the screen, then ask people to respond via their smartphone or laptop. There are many polling tools out there that you can use to collect responses in real time.

5. Use a prop

Use physical, tangible props instead of just PowerPoint slides. You can use a prop onstage to demonstrate ideas, or you can pass it around the audience so that they can engage with it. Anything tangible increases the number of senses engaged and boosts your audience's attention. For example, in her speech My Stroke of Insight, Jill Bolte Taylor used a human brain model as a prop to explain what happens during a stroke.

6. Use body movement

Your body movements can be a way to engage your listeners: the way you gesture and the way you move around your speaking area. You might even go a little bit into your audience, like up an aisle for a little bit. That's much more engaging than just standing still in one place the whole time. Bring people into the interaction and get them much more excited.

I. ▶ Watch a video in which Duncan Wardle, the former head of Innovation & Creativity at Disney, gave a talk "The Theory of Creativity". Analyse how he interacted with the audience in his presentation and tick the techniques that he used.

- ☐ A. Ask more questions.
- ☐ B. Ask the audience to do something physical.
- ☐ C. Invite a volunteer.
- ☐ D. Use a polling tool.
- ☐ E. Use a prop.
- ☐ F. Use body movement.

Use the space below to take notes of detailed examples of the techniques he used.

II. Throughout history, people have first imagined and then created new things to make their lives better, safer, easier, and more enjoyable. A great invention opens the door to a new era in human history. Give a speech on a great invention that changed history. Remember to interact with the audience in your presentation.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Group discussion

Discuss in groups and decide on which invention you will introduce. The choices below may serve as your reference.

stone ax

steam engine

electricity

computer

...

Then search and collect information about the invention. The questions below may serve as your reference.

When and where was the invention created?

Who invented it?

How was it invented?

What problem(s) did the invention solve?

What new opportunities did it open up?

What impact did it have on the world?

What are the possible side effects brought by the invention?

Step 2 Preparation and practice

Make use of the techniques of interacting with the audience to make your presentation more engaging.

Step 3 Presentation

Each group will choose a representative to do a presentation in class. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, and reflect on whether the speakers are effectively interacting with the audience. After all presentations are finished, the whole class should vote for the most engaging presentation.

Do schools kill creativity? This video exemplifies how the existing educational system kills students' creativity, explores the reasons behind it, and makes suggestions for changes.

I. ▶ Watch the video and fill in the blanks.

On the first day at school, Sarah was told "School is not a place to 1 _____; it's a place to get 2 _____." This exemplifies that our education system attaches greater importance to subjects like math, 3 _____ or 4 _____ than subjects like sports and 5 _____. This is because the former ones could best support the developments of industrialization.

However, with the advances in 6 _____, we will need to develop new business ideas and 7 _____. Therefore, the system of education needs change in order to educate our children to solve future challenges in a 8 _____ way. First, put all subjects on the 9 _____ level and give students more 10 _____ to choose what they like to learn. Second, assign 11 _____ tasks to cultivate 12 _____ to students with different strengths. Finally, encourage creative expression from students.

II. ▶ The video you have just watched was created and released by Simpleshow Foundation, an organization committed to explaining various topics in a simple way for people worldwide. In this video, the video creator presents information and ideas about an existing educational issue. Review the following skill on how to identify different modes of presenting information. Then watch the video again and fill in the blanks.

Critical Thinking Skill: Identifying Different Modes of Presenting Information

As we have learned in Unit 3, Book 3, there are generally five types of modes to present information: linguistic, visual (symbolic), aural (oral), spatial, and gestural. Many speakers often use more than one mode to convey their central message effectively. Identifying different modes of presenting information helps listeners gain an in-depth understanding of the presentation.

In this unit, we continue to learn about different modes of presenting information. Information needs to be presented clearly and in the most appropriate way. There are all possible formats: essay, leaflet, poster, website and presentation (slideshow). In each of these formats, the speaker could include one or all of these: text, image and photo, graph or chart, audio, video and animation. When you are trying to identify different modes of presenting information, you can ask yourself the following questions:

1. What is the speaker's purpose?
2. Who might be the audience?
3. What media has the speaker included, e.g. audio, video, images and photos, animation, charts and graphs?
4. What steps has the speaker taken to ensure his/her work appeals to the audience?

You can figure out answers to these questions by either searching for background information or analysing a presentation or a video in detail. Understanding these techniques of presenting information can help us better understand a video or a presentation, and using these techniques can help us get our information across.

1 What is the video creator's purpose?

The purpose of the video is _____.

2 Who might be the audience?

The intended audience are probably _____.

3 What media has the video creator included?

In order to make it accessible to the audience, the video creator has to present the information with _____ aided with _____ that can symbolize the concepts concerned. For instance, _____ symbolizes "knowledge" and "education system". And the creator uses _____ to introduce the problem and explain its effects.

4 What steps has the video creator taken to ensure his work appeals to the audience?

To give a complete picture of the topic, all the information is clearly organized following the _____ pattern.

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

1 The speaker suggests that schools should put subjects like sports and arts on the same level like math, languages or humanities. Do you think arts and sports should be an important and mandatory part of education? Why?

2 British education expert Sir Ken Robinson said, "We are educating people out of their creative capacities …" Do you agree with his opinion? If yes, what are the causes of that?

Putting into Practice: Project

Children's picture books have all of the following characteristics: lovable characters; a great story; an important life lesson for kids; beautiful language; and fantastic drawings. Creating a picture book will require you to bring your creativity into full play. Work in groups and create a children's picture book.

You may take the following steps:

1 Read lots of picture books for inspiration. Read some of the wonderful picture books that are available online or at bookstores to get a feel for the style and design of children's picture books.

2 Brainstorm. Let your imagination run wild and write down all your thoughts and ideas on a piece of paper. Think about different characters and scenarios. Leave some time to let the ideas settle. Come back to them and see which idea you think is the strongest and worth developing.

Who will be your central character?
Where will your story be set?
What will happen?
How will the story end?

3 Discuss in groups. Each member shares his/her ideas, and the group decides on a story that is most worth developing.

4 Develop the character and storyline. Group members work together to think about a strong title and a series of adventures for your character, and make sure that your storyline has plenty to keep your reader interested.

Note-Taking Skill: The Cornell Method

In Unit 3, Book 3, we have learned to take notes using the Cornell method. By dividing the paper into two columns and writing down the main points in the left column and the supporting or related details in the right column, we can organize the information better and easily follow the speaker. In this unit, let's reinforce the use of this method. Here are some specific tips for taking notes in each column:

✧ The left column

- Keep it simple. Use bullet points, abbreviations and any personal note-taking symbols instead of writing out complete sentences.
- Record the key ideas rather than those illustrative examples. Go for big ideas in listening, for it not only saves time and space but also forces you to make connections between the ideas.

✧ The right column

- Summarize key points. Underline or highlight the key facts or important details in the right column and write very condensed version — key words and short phrases that convey the most important information or concepts — in the right column.
- Cross out unimportant information. Identify the crucial information and discard what is unnecessary. It helps you predict what main points might appear in the next part of your notes.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Telling a Story

In the previous unit, you have learned the importance of interacting with your audience. In this unit, we will share a useful way to connect with your audience: storytelling. The most effective presenters use the same techniques as storytellers. A good story can tie concepts together even better than data and figures; it is also a powerful way to grab attention, hold attention and change beliefs because it works in the same way that it does in our favourite books and movies.

Presenters could consider telling a story either at the very beginning or at the end of a presentation. However, since the most important part of a presentation is probably in the first 90 seconds where you could either grab your audience's attention or fail to do so, diving right into a story at the very beginning is strongly recommended.

How to craft an inspiring story when your most important content consists of data, insights and numbers? Here are some rules you should keep in mind:

✧ Gripping stories have a hero. The most beloved stories often depict a hero. For example, Simba in The Lion King, Luke Skywalker in Star Wars, and Harry Potter in that popular book and movie series. The hero's journey is what intrigues the audience. You can try either of the following two ways:

- Introduce a hero. Stories build suspense by introducing a hero, a challenge, a journey and finally, a resolution that delivers the hero into an improved reality. Such stories evoke chemical, physical and emotional responses in listeners.
- Position your audience as a hero. They are the ones who must cross the threshold and set off for an adventure. And you are the one to dare and encourage them. It is your ideas in the presentation that guide them through the quest to reach a better solution.

✧ Personal stories can generate empathy. Personal stories help listeners think about themselves, not about you. Then the audience are more likely to trust you and adopt your ideas. To figure out what to share, you should get to know your audience. You can try either of the following two ways:

- Divide them into sub-segments (by profession or age, etc.). Then focus on speaking to the group who you are most likely to relate to or win over.

- Send out surveys to the audience. Send out surveys to know what they care about or ask yourself in-depth questions about them.

✧ Contrast can be used to build tension in stories. The tension helps persuade the audience to adopt a new mindset — to create a gap between "what is" and "what could be". Thus, audience cannot wait to hear how they will be able to bridge the gap. You could:

- Craft the beginning. Start by describing life as the audience knows it as a baseline of "what is", then introduce your vision of "what could be".
- Develop the body. Keep showing the contrast. As you move back and forth, audience will find "what could be" is more alluring.
- Deliver a powerful ending. End your story with an inspiring call, so the audience would realize how much better their world will be when they adopt your ideas.

I. ▶ Watch a video in which a speaker explains the development of storytelling. Analyse how he incorporates the above rules of storytelling in his presentation.

1 Who is the "hero" in the story told by the speaker?

2 What is the hero's journey in the story?

3 How does the speaker use contrast in the story to "craft the beginning"?

4 Why do the audience laugh at the end of the presentation?

II. No man is an island, but what if you are stranded on a deserted island where you are forced to live for six months? What is the best survival kit? What will you do to survive? Choose three items from the picture below and give a presentation on how to survive on a deserted island.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Choosing items

Work in groups and choose three items you want to take with you, and think about the reasons.

Item 1: .....

Item 2: .....

Item 3: .....

Step 2 Considering the questions

Before adding a story for your presentation, draw an outline based on the following questions you might answer in your presentation.

What problems could you meet on the island?

What are the most important things for an individual to survive?

How would the items you choose help you?

What might such an experience teach you?

Step 3 Designing your outline with a story

After you have drawn an outline of your presentation, you are encouraged to add a story to the beginning, ending, or anywhere in the middle of it to engage your audience. Now decide what story you will choose and how you would like to build tension in your story. Tick the box below and incorporate the story into your presentation.

When	Who	How
☐ At the beginning	☐ A "hero"	☐ Craft the beginning
☐ In the middle	☐ The speaker	☐ Develop the body
☐ At the end	☐ The audience	☐ Deliver a powerful ending

Step 4 Delivering your speech

Incorporate the story into your presentation and pay attention to its logical connection with the rest of the presentation. Each group will give the presentation and the rest of the class should listen carefully and use the checklist below to evaluate the storytelling in the presentation.

Group	Evaluation Checklist
Performance	Yes	No	Notes
Do you like the story?
Is the story logically relevant to the content?
Do you think the story is necessary?
Do you think there is a better version of the story?

What is public value? What is the relationship between public value and society? How does it influence different individuals? In this video, the speaker will explain the concept through an animation.

I. Watch the video and fill in the blanks.

5 Organisations may _____ common good.
6 Public value is about looking at organisations from _____.

II. In this video, the speaker explains how public value relates to the individual and society. Review the following skill on how to interpret the given information through examples. Then watch the video again and give some examples to interpret the given statements.

Critical Thinking Skill: Interpreting the Given Information Through Examples

In Unit 8, Book 3, we have learned the three-step process to interpret the given information through examples. You need to identify the speaker's point and form your own point, then support your own point with examples, and finally explain your examples. In this unit, let's focus on the types of examples and learn to give relevant, appropriate examples to illustrate the given information.

Here is a checklist of different types of examples:

- Brief examples — also called specific instances — may be referred to in passing to illustrate a point. You could also use brief examples to pile them one upon the other until you create the desired impression.
- Extended examples are often called narratives, illustrations, or anecdotes. By telling a story vividly and dramatically, the speaker can pull the audience into the speech.
- Hypothetical examples — Apart from factual examples, you could use a hypothetical example — one that describes an imaginary situation. Usually such examples are brief stories that relate to a general principle. You could create a realistic scenario and relate it directly to your interpretation.

No matter what example you choose to illustrate the given information, you should note the following tips for good examples:

- Give specific and relevant examples. Specific and relevant examples are clearer and more convincing.
- Give interesting and entertaining examples. Interesting examples are usually those detailed and fully developed ones that relate to personal experiences.
- Give vivid and richly textured examples. Richly textured examples supply everyday details that bring the examples to life. The more vivid your examples are, the more impact they are likely to have on your audience.

Example:

They produce goods and services; they create jobs, pay taxes and social contributions.

Alibaba Group offers thousands of goods online and provides sourcing and online transaction services. They have created over 40 million jobs and paid 51.6 billion yuan in tax last year. Since establishment, they have been supporting environmental protection in China and helping the disadvantaged.

1 They constitute — as sociologists like to say — a reproduction mechanism of society with all its values, rules and norms.

2 It represents the values and norms, which shape our way of living together and which everybody benefits from.

3 Accordingly, organisations may destroy or create common good. This, however, depends on one's perspective.

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

1 Could you give an example on how an organisation or a company has influenced you? Is it a positive or negative influence? Why?

2 If you were an entrepreneur, what would you do to make your company exert a positive effect on the individual and the public?

Humans are social animals. We connect with everything around us in different ways. How do you feel when you participate in group activities? What have you gained from such experiences? Work in groups and give a presentation.

You may take the following steps:

1 Each group member comes up with one group activity that he or she has joined in school. Here are some group activities for your reference: group discussion; student union; dance club; sports team.

2 Each group member shares the story/stories about that memorable activity. You are encouraged to use the storytelling techniques you have learned in this unit.

3 Choose the most impressive story and discuss the relationship between the individual and the group that is reflected in the story. You may talk about the following questions in group discussion:

1) What is the most memorable group activity that you have ever joined?
2) Why did you join this activity?
3) How does this activity influence your study and everyday life?
4) What relationship between the individual and the group could you see from this experience?

4 Choose one group member to organize the information and give a presentation to the whole class.

Note-Taking Skill: Key Words

In Unit 4, Book 3, we have learned to take notes by noting down the key words. In this unit, let's reinforce this skill. Please review the key concepts briefly as follows.

When you listen to a speech or a lecture, there will always be important vocabulary that you need to recognize and understand. Key words contain the essence of communication. They are the specific content words, i.e. technical words that are related to the subject, such as names, numbers, dates and places. By noting down these key words and the relationships between them, you can take effective notes.

Besides technical words, key words also include verbs, adjectives and adverbs. Verbs express an action, an event or a state. Adjectives give important extra information. And adverbs add more information about place, time, manner, cause or degree. These words are also worth your attention in listening.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Explaining a Concept

In an academic lecture or conversation, the speaker may sometimes explain a term or concept that is unfamiliar to the audience. To help the audience clearly follow his explanation, he needs to define the term in simple language by illustrating the concept with examples that are familiar to the audience or by making analogies.

Let's read the following speech to see how the speaker explains the concept "investing by leveraging an undervalued asset" by giving an example that is familiar to the audience.

"Years ago when people really wanted to make a good investment to make money, what did they do? They bought an undervalued asset. They leveraged that asset, and they kept it until it became a more valuable asset. Let me give you an example. When real estate is undervalued, people borrow money from a bank, buy the property, wait until the property rises in value, and then sell it. That's how fortunes can be made."

The following are some useful expressions you can use to give definitions and examples:

✧ Giving Definitions

- X means …
- X can be defined as …
- X is a type of Y which …
- X is known as …
- X is actually …

✧ Giving Examples

- For example/instance, …
- X is a case in point.
- Let's see …
- Take X for instance/example.
- Take X as an example.
- Let me give you some specific examples.
- The following are some common examples.

Making analogies may also help the audience better understand a concept. An analogy involves explaining an unfamiliar concept in terms of a familiar one. When you are choosing an analogy, it's generally a good idea to find an example from real life, for that will simplify the message that you want the audience to take away.

Let's read the following speech to see how the speaker explains the concept of "a computer firewall" by giving an analogy.

"What is a computer firewall? Say, you have a certain amount of money deposited in the bank. One day, you want to withdraw the money. Do you go directly into the bank and get the money? No. You might go to the counter clerk and identify yourself; the clerk then will make sure you have money in your account; and then give you the money. Similarly, a firewall is like a bank clerk, ensuring that people who want information and access to an IT network are trusted to have that access."

By making analogies between "a computer firewall" and "a bank clerk", the speaker makes it easy for the audience to understand a complicated term.

I. ▶ Watch two video clips in which the speakers use examples or analogies to explain concepts and complete the table below.

Video Clip	Explaining a Concept
Clip 1 	So, the reason we care about 1 _____ … first of all, biodiversity just means all the life around us: the plants, the 2 _____, the birds, the microbes … the 3 _____ of life that exists in a particular area, we say the biodiversity of a particular area.
Clip 2 	• The 4 _____ is the idea that tiny causes like a flap of a butterfly's wings in Brazil can have 5 _____ like setting off a tornado in Texas. • In pop culture, the butterfly effect has come to mean that even tiny seemingly 6 _____ choices you make can have huge consequences later on in your life.

II. Nature provides people with a variety of plants, animals, landscapes, natural phenomena, etc. Its beauty is beyond description. Give a speech on one beautiful thing of nature and define the key concept in your speech with examples or analogies.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Selecting a topic

Work in groups and brainstorm the beauty and variety of nature. The list below may serve as your reference. Decide on the concept you'd like to define and discuss what you already know about the topic and what you'd like to explore further.

- Plants: annuals, biennials, perennials, bedding plants, trees, shrubs, climbers, bulbs;
- Animals: invertebrates, fish, amphibians, reptiles, birds, mammals;
- Landscapes: desert, plain, wetland, mountain, cliff, coast, peninsula, glacier, jungle, rainforest, moor;
- Natural phenomena: meteor shower, aurora, solar eclipse, lunar eclipse, tsunami, tornado, fog, thunder, lightning.

Step 2 Gathering examples or analogies

As you decide on the concept, you are well on your way to collecting examples or analogies to help you define the concept. You are encouraged to use a variety of ways to search for materials, like searching through the Internet, referring to an encyclopedia, going to a library, asking an expert, talking with your classmates, etc.

Step 3 Delivering your speech

Before the presentation, rehearse your speech in your group. Group members should listen carefully to provide constructive suggestions. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on whether the examples or analogies the speaker uses in the presentation help define the concept.

Human life is only possible because of biological diversity and what ecosystems provide us with. But we are destroying them. In this video, the speaker exposes human destruction of biodiversity and ecosystems, and proposes solutions.

I. ▶ Watch the video and complete the table below.

The 1 _____ of Biodiversity	• Human life is only possible because of 2 _____ and what ecosystems provide us with. • Our ability to 3 _____ depends on biodiversity.

Consequences of Human Behaviour	• One fifth of the world's coral reefs are dead, and more animal species 7 _____ each year. • The bees that 8 _____ food crops are under pressure. • We've lost one tenth of the planet's terrestrial biodiversity and a third of freshwater biodiversity since 1970. • For every dollar we 9 _____ in biodiversity, we spend thirteen dollars on things that damage it.
13 _____ Needed to Be Taken	• We need more 10 _____ and closer cooperation between governments, business and civil society. • 11 _____ activities that harm biodiversity, paying landowners to do more to keep water clean or reduce deforestation and reducing harmful subsidies. • Using biodiversity offsets can also 12 _____ damage to nature from development.

II. ▶ In this video, the speaker talks about how humans destroy biodiversity and how to sustain the ecosystem. Review the following skill on how to identify a recurrent theme. Then watch the video again and fill in the blanks.

Critical Thinking Skill: Identifying Recurrent Themes

In Unit 5, Book 3, we have got familiar with the ways to identify recurrent themes. In this unit, we will firstly review what we've learned and then learn two new ways to identify recurrent themes. Let's review first:

First, what is a recurrent theme? A recurrent theme is a message that can be revisited for many times. Whether you're having a conversation in real life or listening to a lecture, knowing how to identify recurrent themes is key to actually understanding what the other person is trying to say. A recurrent theme is the most important concept of the passage as a whole. Once you understand the main point, all the details will fall into place, but without the main points, nothing really makes sense.

Second, how to identify recurrent themes? You should try to identify word chains or repeated words. These words usually scatter all throughout the passage, not just in one section or another. Identifying them will help you comprehend a passage, thus identifying the recurrent theme. Paying attention to the beginning and the end of a speech is another way to help identify recurrent themes. At the beginning, speakers usually downright tell you what and why they want to talk about a certain topic, and at the end, they often recap by repeating their theme.

Besides the two ways mentioned in Book 3, here are some other ways to help you identify recurrent themes:

- Pay attention to the heading. The theme is undoubtedly related to the heading. The heading usually provides key information of the theme and will help determine subthemes.
- Figure out the opinion and attitude of the speaker. The opinion and attitude of the speaker would certainly lead you towards the theme detection. They can be inferred from the way the speaker describes and comments on the issue in question.

Heading of the video: 1 _____

Introductory words: Human life is only possible because of 2 _____.

Concluding words: We can all help by 3 _____ all around us and the need to 4 _____ it. Our lives depend on it.

Repeated words: 5 _____

The opinion of the speaker: 6 _____

The attitude of the speaker: 7 _____

The recurrent theme of the video: 8 _____

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

1 Why is biodiversity so important and worthy of protection?

2 We are destroying natural resources, wildlife and habitats that we depend upon for survival at a devastating pace. Why? What should we do to protect biodiversity?

Putting into Practice: Project

Mother Nature is a common personification of nature that focuses on the life-giving and nurturing aspects of nature. We humans depend on nature heavily for almost everything, but without humans, nature is still there. Sadly, Mother Nature has been severely devastated and wounded by some destructive human activities. Fortunately, a day is set to demonstrate support for the protection of nature: Earth Day. Work in groups and design a poster for Earth Day.

You may take the following steps:

1 Discuss in groups and choose one aspect of the protection of nature. The following list is for your reference:

- Water
- Air
- Soil
- Plants
- Animals
- Ecosystems

2 Do some research about the aspect you want to focus on.

- Current situation (pictures, statistics, news reports, facts …)
- Causes (economic, social, human …)
- Measures (government, organization, individual, the whole society …)

3 Discuss within your group what you want to include in your poster.

4 Design the layout of your poster. Remember that posters can show both textual and graphical information. You may refer to the following formats, but you are greatly encouraged to design by yourself.

5 Put up all the posters on the walls outside your classroom.

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: The Paragraph Method

In Unit 5, Book 3, we have learned to take notes using the paragraph method, i.e. to take notes in the form of a paragraph. In this unit, we are going to reinforce the use of the paragraph method. Using the paragraph method doesn't mean creating your own original paragraph or writing every word down, but means determining major points by writing down key words or phrases. Please review it by looking at the following example.

Let's suppose the following paragraph is what you hear:

At the end of the twentieth century, the United Kingdom's population, at around sixty million, was similar to that of Italy, but Italy's population was shrinking because its birth rate had fallen below its death rate. The UK's population was still growing, although very slowly — at a rate of 0.09% between 1995 and 2000.

The notes taken in the paragraph form can be as follows:

End of 20th century, UK population, 60 million, similar to Italy, but Italy shrinking because birth rate below death rate. UK population growing, slowly — 0.09% 1995–2000.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Explaining a Method or a Process

Explaining a method or a process is usually used when you are describing how to do or make something, for example, how to change a bicycle tire. It can also be used to explain how something happens, for example, how people prepare for a wedding. In an academic lecture or conversation, the speaker may sometimes explain a method or a process of dealing with a problem or a situation. To help the audience clearly follow his explanation, he needs to present it in a clear, logical manner.

Here are four useful steps to follow to help you explain a method or a process.

Step 1: Choose a topic and analyse your audience

You should decide on a topic that fits your presentation context and your audience. Please keep your audience's background knowledge in mind. What do your audience already know about the method or process you are going to explain? How much detail are they likely to need? Will you need to define unfamiliar terms? Different kinds of methods or processes are explained in different models according to their contexts and audience. For example, if you are explaining how bicycle derailleur gears work to people with little technical background, you should use vocabulary that most of the audience can understand, as Model I does; if you are explaining it to cyclists who want to work on their bicycles, you should provide more thorough information, using more technical terms such as chainwheel and freewheel, as Model II does.

Model I	Model II
The chain connecting the pedals of a bicycle to the rear wheel acts as a belt to make the wheel turn faster than the feet. To ride on the level or downhill, the rear-wheel sprocket needs to be small for high speeds. But to climb hills it needs to be large so that the rear wheel turns with less speed but more force. Derailleur gears solve the problem by having rear-wheel sprockets of different sizes. A gear-changing mechanism transfers the chain from one sprocket to the next.	The basic derailleur system uses a combination of two sprockets (called chainwheels) on the front where the pedals are joined, and five sprockets (called freewheels) at the rear attached to the wheel. To utilize all of the potential gear variations, a method to move the chain from sprocket to sprocket was developed. Using a control lever, the rider can move the derailleur, which in turn forces the chain to adjacent sprockets.

Step 2: Make a list of the important parts of the method or the process

When you are making the list, consider the following aspects:

- What tools, supplies, or materials do you need to use the method or complete the process?
- Do you need to define some terminology for your audience?
- Where is the method used or where does the process usually take place?
- How long does it take to use the method or to complete the process?
- What kind of examples can you use to explain what you are doing clearly?

Step 3: Organize your notes

Group different parts of the method or the process and organize your points in the order of time.

Step 4: Explain the method or the process

You may begin with a good topic sentence or sentences to state clearly what you will be explaining. For example: Christmas is one of the most important celebrations of the year for my family, and so our preparations are spread out over the month or so before Christmas. Then you should continue your explanation in chronological order and use transitional expressions to smooth the flow of your explanation and show connections between different parts of your explanation.

N.B. When you are explaining something, there are some common, useful and simple language features you can use to sound fluent and natural.

- The imperative. One common feature of describing a method or a process, such as the instructions for how to make a particular dish, is the use of the imperative. For example, "Use a minimum of four eggs per omelette …", "You use a minimum of four eggs …", etc.
- Signpost words. When you are giving a series of instructions, it's more logical and natural to join the different instructions together through using signpost words. For example, sequential words such as "first" and "second", or linking words such as "and" and "then" are frequently used in presentations.

EXAMPLE

Amy Morin is a licensed clinical social worker, psychotherapist, college psychology instructor and internationally recognized expert on mental strength. She delivered a presentation at TED Talks, explaining "The Secret of Becoming Mentally Strong". Let's take her speech as an example to see how a method or a process can be appropriately explained in a presentation.

The topic and the audience: Amy Morin is a licensed clinical social worker and psychotherapist. Since 2002, she has been counselling children, teens, and adults. She also works as an adjunct psychology instructor. Amy's expertise in mental strength has attracted international attention. Therefore, she chose "mental strength" as her presentation topic. Since her audience may not specialize in that area, she explained "the secret" using vocabulary and cases that most people could understand.

Important points: Amy organized and presented the secret of becoming mentally strong by sharing her own past experiences in a chronological order. And then, she summarized the method to build up strong mentality by giving tips with supporting examples.

The method or process: She explained the method by using her experiences: "When I was 23 years old, I thought I've got an incredible jump start on success. But that all changed for me one day when my mother passed away. It took a long time before I felt like I was really healing … And then on the three-year anniversary of my mother's death, my husband Lincoln collapsed and passed away. It was during that painful period of time that I held out hope that someday life could get better. And eventually it did … A few years down the road, I met Steve. We fell in love and I got remarried. But almost as quickly as I breathed my sigh of relief, Steve's father had terminal cancer. And I started to think why these things always have to keep happening. But I knew I was going to need mental strength to get through one more loss. So I sat down and wrote a list of all the things mentally strong people don't do. And I read over that list." She then summarized: "My journey taught me that the secret to being mentally strong was that you had to give up your bad mental habits. It starts by countering those unhealthy beliefs with healthier ones. For example … Then get through uncomfortable emotions by going through them. Let yourself feel sad, and then move on … Remember you won't necessarily be rewarded for your goodness, but you're not doomed to keep suffering … Your world is what you make it. But of course, before you can change your world, you have to believe that you can change it. I once worked with this man who …"

How can you live a rich and meaningful life? How do you achieve your goals or realize your values? In this video, the speaker compares two different ways to live one's life — goal-focused life and values-focused life.

I. Watch the video and complete the table below.

Goal-focused Life	Values-focused Life
There is a little moment of 1 _____ in achieving goals when you get a great job, 2 _____	In the values-focused life, we have 3 _____ every step of the way towards our goals, 4 _____ of achieving our goals and 5 _____ even when we don't achieve our goals.

II. ▶ In this video, the speaker uses the case of two kids to compare two different attitudes toward life. Review the following skill on how to view an issue from multiple perspectives. Then watch the video again and fill in the blanks.

Critical Thinking Skill: Viewing an Issue from Multiple Perspectives

In Unit 6, Book 3, we have got familiar with ways of viewing an issue from multiple perspectives. In this unit, we are going to reinforce the importance of different perspectives and the ways to view things from different perspectives.

1. The importance of viewing an issue from multiple perspectives

Successful problem-solvers usually have the ability to take others' cognitive and affective perspectives, and understand how a problem appears and how others are reacting emotionally and attitudinally. It is important to look at an issue from multiple perspectives in order to see the whole picture, which better enables you to find the root cause of the problem and come up with a solution that takes the needs and feelings of everyone involved into consideration.

2. Ways to view an issue from multiple perspectives

Einstein once said, "The problem is to know what the problem is." The following ways might help you view an issue or a problem from multiple perspectives:

a. Open your mind. If what seems to be a major inconvenience to you turns out to be beneficial for others, you should open your mind and consider a wider frame of view so as to generate previously unseen perspectives and resolutions.

b. Seek a helping hand. To bring in people with expertise in other areas might be a useful way because a fresh, new perspective into the matter will help clear the fog.

c. Investigate the context. Knowing the context allows you to further point to the core and nature of the issue and helps you develop better methods of dealing with a problem.

There are radically different ways to live your life: one is to achieve your goals; another is a values-focused life. It's like two kids in the back of a car on a journey to Disneyland.

A three-hour car journey to Disneyland:

The goal-focused kid: keeps asking 1 "_____", has a journey of 2 _____.

The values-focused kid: is in touch with 3 _____,

has a journey of 4 _____.

On the way home:

The goal-focused kid: keeps asking 5 "_____"

The values-focused kid: looks out of the window, notices 6 _____, spots 7 _____.

Car breakdown:

The goal-focused kid: keeps complaining 8 "_____"

The values-focused kid: notices 9 _____ when sitting in the front of a pickup truck.

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

Putting into Practice: Project

Many reputable universities in the world attach great importance to their core values. For example, Tsinghua University sets "self-discipline and social commitment" as their motto and cherishes the spirit of "actions speak louder than words"; Cornell University adopts a set of core values like "purposeful discovery", "a community of belonging", "exploration across boundaries" to lay the foundation for a more equitable and inclusive atmosphere for their campuses. The values of a university show its collective aspirations and serve as a reference for setting strategies and objectives for teams and individuals. Work in groups and prepare a presentation on "Core Values of My University".

You may take the following steps:

1 Work in groups and find out your university's core values.

What are the core values of my university?

2 Do research on the history of your university to explore how the values came into being.

History	How did the values come into being?

3 Share your understanding of these values and explain why they are important to your university.

4 Make a plan for yourself to achieve these values.

What can I do to achieve these values?

5 Make a presentation to the whole class and compare different groups' interpretations of the core values.

Note-Taking Skill: Noting Causes and Effects

In Unit 6, Book 3, we have learned to note causes and effects in note-taking. In this unit, let's reinforce this skill. Please review the key points as follows.

1. Listen for expressions indicating cause-and-effect relationships, such as "due to", "that's why …", "therefore" and "so".
2. Take notes about causes and effects with symbols and shorthand, for example, ∵, ∴, b/c, →, etc.
3. For multiple causes and effects, i.e., an effect having more than one cause or a cause having more than one effect, we can use the diagram format in note-taking.

In this unit, we should pay attention to the fact that in many cases, verbs and verb phrases can also be used to introduce causes and effects. The following are some examples:

1. cause, trigger, create, motivate, render, raise, make, generate, produce, …
2. result in, lead to, bring about, bring on, bring forth, give rise to, account for, contribute to, …

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Reasoning with Examples

You have learned the power of persuasion in previous units. In a classroom presentation, you have to convince your classmates and the professor that what you are talking about is worth listening to, and that your hard work deserves a good grade. In a job interview, you have to persuade your interviewers why they should hire you and not the other candidates. In the workplace, you should pitch your ideas persuasively in order to prosper in your career. If you look at highly successful people, you will see that they are not only hard workers and creative thinkers, but also great persuaders.

If you are amateur public speakers with probably no initial credibility, it is very helpful to use examples to persuade your audience. Appropriate examples can support the speaker's contention that a general statement is true. Not only do they provide details in support of a claim, but the vivid description they often include helps to capture and retain the audience's attention.

When you are reasoning with examples, try to remember the following tips.

1. Be certain about your examples. You need to be as accurate as possible to use your examples to increase your credibility. So do not use any examples if you are not sure whether they are true or false.
2. Learn to use linking words. Linking words may help your audience better understand the structure of your presentation and distinguish your main idea from your supporting details. Some commonly used linking words introducing examples are recommended, such as take ... for example, for instance, for example, as an illustration, namely, ...
3. Choose the most effective instance. If you have several illustrations supporting one idea, you need to select the most relevant and effective one. It is suggested that only one typical illustration should be used to support a particular idea.

I. ▶ Watch a video in which a speaker uses specific examples to support her claim. Analyse how she appropriately uses examples in her reasoning.

1 Is the speaker certain about her examples? Why or why not?

2 Does the speaker use linking words to introduce her examples? If yes, what are the functions of these linking words?

3 Do you think these examples are effective? Why or why not?

II. An aging society is no longer on the horizon. It is here with us today. People have their different takes on this issue. Some are concerned about the increasing number of the elderly and the decreasing working-age population, while others always see a silver lining behind the cloud. What does an aging society mean? Does it bring challenges or opportunities to us? Work in groups and prepare a speech on the topic "An Aging Society — a Challenge or an Opportunity?"

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Deciding on your stance

Work in groups and brainstorm what you've already known about this topic. You need to decide on your stance and explore further.

Step 2 Planning your structure

Draw an outline based on the following questions:

What is your main point?

How many different aspects are you going to talk about to support your main point?

What examples will you use to illustrate your viewpoint?

How will you conclude your speech?

Step 3 Polishing your examples

As you work out the main ideas, you need to collect examples as supporting materials. Make sure your examples are credible and relevant.

Step 4 Delivering your speech

Rehearse your speech in your group before delivering it to the whole class. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on whether the presentations are effective with a particular focus on incorporating examples. They can use the checklist below to evaluate the use of examples in the presentation.

Group	Evaluation Checklist
Performance	Yes	No	Notes
Does the speaker reason with examples?
Are the examples accurate and supportive to the claim the speaker is making?
Does the speaker use linking words to make it easier for the audience to distinguish main ideas from supporting details?

I. ▶ Watch a video about how the elderly in China might spend their later years and fill in the blanks.

Lu Jicai and his wife 1 _____ at home. They are under the care of their 60-year-old 2 _____ daughter, Lu Ming, who lives together with them. But Lu Ming worries about her daughter, who is the 3 _____ in the family. Once she gets married, the young couple will have 4 _____ by their sides. It could be impossible for them to look after all of them.

In China, there will be 5 _____ elderly people by 2030. 90% of them receive care from 6 _____. As there aren't enough family members to support them, they will have to consider 7 _____. Unfortunately, some of these organizations are either expensive or short of 8 _____. Most people will have to think about 9 _____, such as a hospice.

II. ▶ In this video, the speaker uses the case of the Lu family to illustrate the challenge China faces on how to care for the seniors. Review the following skill on how to generate innovative strategies. Then watch the video again and practice generating innovative strategies by completing the table on China's aging issue.

Critical Thinking Skill: Generating Innovative Strategies

In Unit 4, Book 3, we have got familiar with the four steps we may follow to generate innovative strategies, namely, understand and define your problems, use the existing resources more productively to generate ideas, evaluate the solution to the problem, and work in groups and generate innovative strategies to the problem.

In this unit, we will turn to approaches to reframing a problem to generate innovative solutions. Creativity is applying imagination to address a challenge. If we can look at situations from a fresh perspective and always use our imagination, we can not only find innovative solutions to problems, but also inspire others' imagination. To reframe a problem, there are three things you can do:

1. Rethink the problem

Start questioning the problem presented in front of you from different perspectives, and then brainstorm to expand your thinking on the problem. For example, if you are asked a question "How to solve the global food shortage?", you may ask yourself a set of questions such as "What is food shortage?", "Is there really a problem of food shortage globally?", "What causes the problem?", "How can we solve it?", etc.

2. Brainstorm "bad" ideas

Stupid or ridiculous ideas open up the frame by allowing you to push past obvious solutions, and when you look differently at these terrible ideas and re-evaluate them, you can turn them into something unique and brilliant.

3. Unpack the assumptions

To reframe a problem, you also need to challenge its perceived limitations or possible solutions. Then ask a question, "What are all of the possible solutions?" Make a list and turn it upside down by thinking about what would happen if you did the opposite. This may generate some unique innovative strategies to your problem.

1. Rethink the problem

Situations of the Lu family:

* Lu Jicai and his wife's health is still good and the family is not so 1 _____, so their daughter doesn't have many concerns.
* To relieve the burden on her single child daughter, Lu Ming has not planned for her daughter to 2 _____ in the future.

Critical thinking practice:

1) How could Lu Jicai and his wife spend their senior years if the family situation was the opposite?

Putting into Practice: Project

Getting 60 no longer fills people with dread; instead, many believe that "life begins at 60". The pensioners are finally having their own time and taking age as an opportunity to try new things.

Work in groups and conduct a survey on the elderly. You are to survey pensioners from different walks of life, delve into the activities which are popular among retirees, explore their views towards aging and offer suggestions to make the life of the elderly more meaningful and colourful.

You may take the following steps:

1 Collect information on the topic from different sources such as the Internet, newspaper reports and TV reports, which may cover such sub-topics as popular ways in which the elderly spend their retired life, the changing attitudes towards aging, and governmental measures to improve the life quality of the elderly. You may put down the key points in the following table.

Popular ways of spending retired life
Attitudes towards aging
Governmental measures to improve old people's life

2 Design two questionnaires with at least five questions for each, one on popular activities among retirees and the other on their attitudes towards aging. The questions should cover the different aspects mentioned above. Each group will interview at least 10 people of different genders and from all walks of life. You may design your questionnaire by following the example.

1. What is your favorite outdoor activity? (multiple choices)
   - ☐ Sports
   - ☐ Gardening
   - ☐ Bicycle riding
   - ☐ Square dancing
   - ☐ Stretching activities such as yoga, Tai Chi, etc.

3 Analyse your data, draw conclusions, propose solutions from different perspectives, and write a report about the findings. You can use charts, graphs or tables to visualize your data analysis.

4 Present your group's findings to the whole class. You may make use of videos, posters or other visual aids to keep your audience interested.

Listening as Comprehension

Note-Taking Skill: Noting Comparisons and Contrasts

In Unit 7, Book 3, we have learned that both comparison and contrast are ways of understanding one subject by putting it next to another. Comparing involves discovering likenesses or similarities, while contrasting is based on finding differences. In this unit, let's reinforce the skill of noting comparisons and contrasts.

The following are a group of discourse markers for comparing and contrasting.

Comparison	Contrast
relative to	but
relatively	on the contrary
for comparison	unlike

In note-taking, in order to improve efficiency, note-takers usually turn to symbols to note down comparisons and contrasts. The most commonly used symbol for comparison is "=" (for instance, "the same as" can be noted as "="), while the symbol for contrast is "≠" (for instance, "in contrast to" can be noted as "≠").

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Reasoning with Data

In an argument, data is the evidence or specific information that supports a claim. Data is sometimes referred to as statistics, evidence, reasons, or grounds. Well-placed data can be very helpful in convincing an audience of the validity of your argument.

Quantitative data can be expressed as a number or can be quantified. For example, scores on tests and exams, the weight of a person, the temperature in a room, etc.

Qualitative data can't be expressed as a number and can't be measured. Qualitative data mainly consists of words, pictures, and symbols. For example, one's favourite holiday destination, one's ethnicity and so on.

Data is constructive to your argument only when it's reliable, relevant, and significant.

- Reliable: The source of the data is supposed to be authoritative. You should quote from distinguished authors and use the evidence from reliable sources. Only in this way will your audience find your argument trustworthy.
- Relevant: Ensuring the reliability of your data is just the first step. If the data is not relevant to your topic, there is no point using it. Because irrelevant data only makes your argument go off topic.
- Significant: Instead of flooding your speech with numbers, you should select and report the most significant numbers or percentages in the text. Extreme values (the highest and the lowest) and, of course, means are worth describing. When you are using statistics, you don't have to always use exact numbers and percentages for the audience may find it difficult to follow a presentation with complex numerical data. As for qualitative evidence, you should also make sure that it is the most important supporting detail to back up your arguments.

Speaking of quantitative data, it is important to use language of proportion, approximation, quantifiers or phrases in order to use data more effectively. Here is a list of them.

Proportion	Approximation
half, a quarter, double, triple, a third, three quarters, six times greater than, …	nearly, approximately, roughly, more than, less than, … 2.8% — very few 63.8% — roughly less than two thirds 98% — nearly all

Quantifiers	Phrases
Intensifiers a great deal of, substantially, far, considerably, much, dramatically, significantly, … Softeners relatively, fairly, slightly, a little, somewhat, marginally, …	stand at … go from … to … drop/decline from … to … increase by … decrease by … a spike around …

You may use the following expressions to introduce qualitative data.

Expressions
The most important reason is … The point(s) worth mentioning is/are … In that sense, … It is crucial for … to …

I. ▶ Watch a video about the visible universe and analyse how the speakers reason with data.

1 What is the video trying to get us to believe?

2 What kind of data do the speakers mainly use?

3 How does the data lead to the claim in this video?

II. There are many challenges over the course of space exploration. Each of them impels us to build a better future for mankind. Identify one of the challenges and reason with data why it is a challenge.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Identifying a challenge

Work in groups and brainstorm events your group considers important. Decide on the challenge you'd like to focus on and discuss what you already know about the challenge and what you'd like to explore further. The list below may serve as your reference.

- ✧ Space exploration is a costly venture.
- ✧ Space exploration can be hazardous.
- ✧ Establishing contact with alien life can be dangerous.
- ✧ We could be harming our planet to explore others.

Step 2 Gathering data

Having pinpointed the challenge you want to talk about, you are well on your way to collecting data. To test the validity of your data, you may ask yourself some questions. The list below may serve as your reference.

- ✧ Is the source of the data reliable and trustworthy?
- ✧ How relevant is the data to your claim?
- ✧ Is the data important to your claim?

Step 3 Delivering your speech

Rehearse your speech in your group before delivering it to the whole class. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on whether the presentations are effective with a particular focus on reasoning with data. They can use the checklist below to evaluate the use of data in reasoning.

Group	Evaluation Checklist
Performance	Yes	No	Notes
Does the speaker reason with data?
Is the data reliable, relevant and significant to the speaker's claim?
Does the speaker use expressions to introduce data effectively?

5 ..... Space exploration is also a manner of self-exploration for human beings.

II. ▶ In this video, the speakers demonstrate the progress and the significance of space exploration. But some people claim that space exploration is a waste of time, money and resources. Review the following skill on how to make a case against an argument. Then watch the video again and use what you have learned to make a case against such an argument.

Critical Thinking Skill: Making a Case Against an Argument

In Unit 7, Book 3, we have learned that inaccurate, insufficient or irrelevant evidence would undermine the validity of any argument. Specifically, a weak argument can be factually, morally, or logically flawed. And we can make a case against an argument by pointing out such flaws. In this unit, let's further explore how to argue against opposing views.

The most important thing when arguing against someone is to have engagement between your arguments and your opponents' arguments. Hence, your job is to directly address the opposing views and state why your claims are valid. Essentially, in your argument, you acknowledge the opposition but continue to argue why you're still right.

Here's a quick example of how you might argue against the opposing views in your daily conversations:

Let's say you and a friend are discussing the best local restaurant for a first date.

Your argument is that an Italian place across town is the best because its food is delicious, and the atmosphere is romantic.

Your friend expresses an opposing view by stating that the restaurant isn't at all romantic. She says the restaurant is dark, that the atmosphere is boring and far too quiet, and that it's a place only old people go.

You then argue against the opposing view by stating that a dark and quiet atmosphere doesn't mean that it's dull or boring or only for old people. A quiet, dimly lit dining area is the perfect romantic setting in which to get to know your date.

In this example, you offer your argument. Your friend presents an opposing view. You argue against the opposing view by acknowledging your friend's point, but you still argue why you're right.

Now, let's look at specific strategies you can use to argue against opposing views.

Strategy 1: Point out the flaws in the opposing view

By pointing out the errors or flaws in the opposing view, you can demonstrate that you've examined the issues and understand why some people may have a different perspective. Then you can further prove that your arguments are more credible and stronger than the opposition's.

Strategy 2: Provide additional information to weaken the opposing view

In some instances, it's necessary to partially agree with the opposing view. After all, there may be some validity to the opposition's arguments. In these instances, you can first acknowledge what you consider to be valid in an opposing argument, but then provide further information that strengthens your argument and weakens the opposition's.

Strategy 3: Use transitional words and phrases

You need to first make sure that you've used transitional words and phrases to link your ideas together. Second, it's important that you use such words and phrases to show a switch from the opposing view to your refutation or vice versa. Otherwise, the audience can become confused, not knowing where the opposing view begins or ends, or where your refutation begins.

You may use the following sentence structures to make a case against an argument.

Though the opponents claim ..., their assumptions are inaccurate. The truth is ...

Thanks to ..., we come to realize that .... However, ...

We acknowledge that ..., but we could gain more by ...

Having mentioned ..., we believe it is more urgent and necessary to ...

Although ... is/are important, the priority now is to ...

... should take precedence over ...

However, though ... show(s) ..., I feel that it is more important to focus on ...

Rather than ..., we ought to ... and focus on ...

Space Exploration Is Hard — But Worth It

The opposing view

For some, space exploration is a waste of resources.

- It is suggested that the exploration of space exhausts money and resources that could be better used elsewhere. For example, people could use these resources to deal with overpopulation and under-funded research.
- In addition, the direct intellectual gains from learning about faraway planets or satellites such as the Moon can hardly compensate for the costs. A lot of the advances space exploration brings us are irrelevant to daily life. For instance, why bother spending money developing a zero-gravity pen when the vast majority of the world's 7 billion people will never experience zero gravity? Also, bringing resources to the Earth is not possible with the current technology. Therefore, space exploration is not worth it.

Step 1: Point out the flaws in the opposing view

- This argument is flawed because 1 .....

.....

Step 2: Provide additional information to weaken the opposing view

- I acknowledge that space exploration is a hugely expensive venture.

  Reason: 2 .....

.....

- I recognise and understand the importance of all of these issues. I still want space exploration to continue.

  Reason: 3 .....

Step 3: Use transitional words and phrases

- First, I acknowledge that space exploration is a hugely expensive venture.

  However, 4 .....

- Moreover, I recognise and understand the importance of all of these issues, yet I still want space exploration to continue. Because we could gain more by 5 .....

Note-Taking Skill: Using Symbols and Abbreviations

As we have learned in Unit 8, Book 3, a great way to get information down quickly and effectively during a lecture is to use symbols and abbreviations. The art of taking notes is not to write down everything verbatim but to choose the important parts to note in abbreviated forms. In this unit, let's reinforce this note-taking skill by adding some more common shorthand symbols and abbreviations useful for speedy note-taking. Before you refer to the following table, share with your teacher and classmates the symbols and abbreviations you already know.

Common Symbols and Abbreviations in Note-Taking

Symbol/ Abbr.	Words/Phrases Used in Lectures	Symbol/ Abbr.	Words/Phrases Used in Lectures

You might want to adjust some of the symbols and abbreviations above to suit your own needs or invent some of your own.

Speaking for Communication

Presentation Skill: Reasoning with Expert Testimony

As you have learned in the previous units, examples and data are two types of evidence you can use to make your speech more substantive and credible. In this unit, we are going to include expert testimony as another form of support that you may want to add to your repertoire. Testimony is used in various contexts for a wide range of purposes. For example, in the law, testimony is a form of evidence that is obtained from a witness who makes a solemn statement or declaration of fact. Here in the context of public speaking, we want to make it clear that expert testimony is, in essence, an assertion made by a person who is considered an expert because of his or her knowledge, education, training, certification, skill, or experience in a specific field. Since expert testimony carries great weight, it will add extra credibility to the claims a speaker makes.

How to incorporate expert testimony into your speech then? A rule of thumb is that it is introduced after a claim is made. For example, if a speech makes the claim that "Climate crisis is a threat to human race", it can be followed up with evidence suggested by climatologists' research findings. Such authoritative sources will let the audience know that the speaker has done the homework on the topic, thus bolstering the authority of the speaker.

When citing those sources, you can quote it directly, paraphrase by using your own words, or summarize to condense the information. Whichever you choose, be sure to explain to your audience where the testimony you are using is coming from.

What NOT to do	The Problem	What you SHOULD do
"Research done by Kai Tyler shows that Maya city-states were far more interconnected than anyone had suspected."	Who is Kai Tyler? Your audience probably have never heard this name before. Without some credentials, this doesn't sound like a credible source.	"Research done by Kai Tyler, a well-known archaeologist at the Institute for Maya Studies, shows that Maya city-states were far more interconnected than anyone had suspected."
"According to Yahoo.com, droughts in the ninth century likely contributed to the depopulation and eventual abandonment of an ancient Maya city."	Baidu, Yahoo, Bing, Google — are all search engines, not sources. You may use those search engines to locate a credible source, but you can't cite the search engine itself.	"A study done in 2020 at University of Cincinnati showed that droughts in the ninth century likely contributed to the depopulation and eventual abandonment of an ancient Maya city."

I. Watch a video in which a speaker uses expert testimony to support his claim. Analyse how he incorporates it into his reasoning.

1 Does the speaker provide the expert's name?

2 Does the speaker demonstrate the expert's authority? If yes, how?

3 What else does the speaker say to emphasize the expert's authority?

4 What claim do you think the speaker is trying to make?

II. There are many important milestone events in the evolution of human civilization. Each of them has played its unique role and helped shape the world we live in today. Give a speech on one of these events by incorporating expert testimony to add to its credibility.

You may take the following steps:

Step 1 Selecting a topic

Work in groups and brainstorm events your group considers important. The list below may serve as your reference. Decide on the topic you'd like to focus on and discuss what you already know about the topic and what you'd like to explore further.

The discovery of fire

The Renaissance

The Industrial Revolution

World War I & II

The discovery of penicillin

The launching of the world's first man-made satellite

Step 2 Considering the questions

Before gathering supporting materials for your speech, draw an outline based on the following questions you need to answer in your speech.

What do you know about this event?

When and where did it occur/begin?

What caused it to happen?

What important developments emerged during the period?

What significant role did it play in human civilization?

Step 3 Gathering supporting materials

As you work out the main ideas, you are well on your way to collecting supporting materials. The research process is designed to help you find effective support or evidence. You are encouraged to use a variety of support types such as definitions, data, examples, and of course what we've been learning in this unit — expert testimony. By employing various forms of support to back up your claim, you are likely to appeal to a broader range of audience and make your speech more credible.

Step 4 Delivering your speech

Rehearse your speech in your group before delivering it to the whole class. During the presentations, the rest of the class should listen and observe carefully, take notes and reflect on whether the presentations are effective with a particular focus on incorporating expert testimony. They can use the checklist below to evaluate the use of expert testimony in the presentation.

Group	Evaluation Checklist
Performance	Yes	No	Notes
Does the speaker reason with expert testimony?
Is the expert testimony logically relevant to the claim the speaker is making?
Does the speaker explain the source of the testimony?
Is the expert testimony a credible source?
Does the speaker distort the intent of a source?

Why do civilizations fall? That's a question that may puzzle many people. In this video, the scholar Jared Diamond approaches this topic through analysing the collapse of Greenland Norse society.

I. ▶ Watch the video and put the five-point framework in the order the speaker delivers.

_____ Point 1	A. Relations with neighbouring friendly societies
_____ Point 2	B. Relations with hostile societies
_____ Point 3	C. Human impacts on the environment
_____ Point 4	D. Questions of how political, economic, social, cultural factors play into solving the problems
_____ Point 5	E. Climate change

II. ▶ In this video, the speaker uses the case of the Vikings to illustrate the five-point framework in analysing societal collapse. Review the following skill on how to put the given information into your own words. Then watch the video again and summarize each point in the case of the Vikings.

Critical Thinking Skill: Putting the Given Information into Your Own Words

In Unit 2, Book 3, we have got familiar with the three-step process of putting the given information into our own words in which we mainly focus on paraphrasing. In this unit, we will turn to summarizing as another way to put the given information into your own words. You may wonder what their differences are. To put it simply, summarizing differs from paraphrasing in that a summary leaves out details, examples and supporting ideas while a paraphrase expresses what has been said in different words. In fact, a good summary builds on your ability to do paraphrasing. So let's first review the three steps we've learned in Book 3:

1. Listen to the information and take notes.

2. Organize your notes and prepare for the retelling.

3. Put the given information into your own words.

✧ Use synonyms (words that mean the same)

✧ Change word forms

✧ Change from passive voice to active voice and vice versa

✧ Change the sentence structure and use different connecting words

In a lot of cases, you may not be able to or simply do not have the necessity to retell everything you are told. It's vital that you can differentiate the main ideas from the less important details. And that's where a good summary comes into play. The point of a good summary is to keep the core of the given information. You may want to consult the following tips on how to make a good summary:

- Do not include all the given information in your summary.
- Pay attention to the words and phrases that have been stressed or repeated frequently.
- Identify and paraphrase the topic sentence (which contains the main idea).
- The amount of detail you include, if any, depends on your purpose for doing the summary.
- Change the words but never the meaning.
- Do not bring in your personal opinion.

Point 2
Point 3
Point 4
Point 5

III. Work in groups and discuss the questions.

1 If you could time travel to the period when the Vikings lived, what advice would you give them in order to sustain their society's development?

2 Do you know any other civilizations that have collapsed? Do you think the five-point framework applies to other collapsed civilizations? Why or why not?

Putting into Practice: Project

Will climate change make our planet an uninhabitable place? Will humans exhaust resources that Mother Nature has to offer? Despite our wish to see human civilization continue indefinitely, humans have a nagging fear that our civilization may disappear one day. Perhaps there is something we can all do to protect human civilization. Work in groups and give a presentation on dealing with the greatest threat to human civilization.

You may take the following steps:

1 Discuss in groups and decide on one factor that your group believe is the greatest threat to human civilization. The following list is for your reference:

- Climate change
- Asteroid and comet impacts
- Terrorism
- Bioweapon
- Nuclear war
- Artificial intelligence
- Pandemic
- Nanotechnology
- Aliens

2 Discuss how to address the threat from the following aspects.

Things international organizations can do:

Things governments can do:

Things individuals can do:

3 Prepare a presentation based on your discussion. Search for data and examples as well as expert testimony to make your presentation more convincing and credible. You may also use visual aids to make your presentation vivid and impressive.

4 Deliver the presentation and invite follow-up discussion. Your presentation may follow the format below.

Dealing with the Greatest Threat to Human Civilization
